WPB Lifts Output Curbs On 75 Items For Civilians

Sewing Machines, Cleaners Affected; No Big Increase Seen Immediately

By Ben W. Gilbert

Wartime production controls prohibiting or limiting the manufacture of more than 75 classes of items needed by the civilian economy were stripped away by the War Production Board yesterday in a sweeping reconversion move which puts it up to WPB field offices to determine, on an individual-case basis whether labor, materials, components and facilites are available to permit increased civilian production without interference with the war effort.

Production of such items as vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, sewing machines, cutlery, flatware and hollow ware, electric fans, fountain pens and mechanical pencils, oil burners, typewriters, and miscellaneous kitchen utensils, were authorized—in some cases for the first time sinme the period immediately after Pearl Harbor when drastic controls were imposed on American industry to raise war production up to hitherto unheard of levels.

Cautions Against Optimism

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, cautioned that no large increases in production of civilian goods will be possible "for the time being," because of the continued scarcity of steel and copper.

"This is primarily a plan to decentralize some of the operations which will be necessary to 'take up the slack' as men and materials cease to be needed for war purposes," Nelson said. "Above everything else, it is vital to arrange the machinery so that in the future, when military demands decline or change, the men, facilities and the materials which are set free can speedily be put to other uses."

Manufecturers desiring to produce civilian items again must file two forms with WPB—one for authorization and materials, and one detailing their labor requirements.

Specific Permission Required

Specific permission of the War Manpower Commission's area director must be obtained in writing before new civilian production can be authorized, under a recent directive issued by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Commenting on the effect of this directive on new civilian production, the National Association of Manufacturers predicted that a 200 Use Stamps Sold to Drivers Stopped in D. C.

Wholesale stopping of cars which do not carry use tax stamps was continued with success yesterday, according to Bureau of Internal Revenue officials. Deputy collectors and Metropolitan police, stationed at First st. and Michigan ave. nw. and 14th st. and Constitution ave. nw., sold at least 200 stamps to car owners caught without them.

Meanwhile, about 75 deputy collectors without police stopping power, sold stamps to stampless car owners at curbs and parking lots throughout Washington, Revenue officials said.

The sale of the reduced price stamp has been withdrawn from postoffices because of the difficulty of establishing whether or not the purchaser had just put his car into use. Proof that a car is being newly used must accompany a request to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for a reduced price stamp.

Nats Lead Tribe, 2-0, In Second Torres Triples

The Nats were leading the Cleveland Indians, 2 to 0, at the end of two innings last night as the two nines clashed in the third game of their series.

FIRST INNING.

CLEVELAND—Rocco singled to right. Boaz hit into a double play, Sullivan to Myatt to Kuhel. Seerey fanned. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

SECOND INNING

CLEVELAND—Boudreau doubled down the left field line. Boudreau was caught off second, Ferrell to Sullivan, when O'Dea missed an attempted bunt. O'Dea bounced a grounder off Wolff's foot. Cal Myatt recovered in time to make the out, Myatt to Kuhel. Boaz flied to Powell. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Kennedy Hears Son Is Killed In Plane Blast

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
Lieut. Joseph P. Kennedy, jr.

Lieut. Joseph P. Kennedy, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Britain, is missing in action as the result of an explosion on an operational flight, the Navy announced yesterday.

At his parents' summer home on Cape Cod, however, it was said word had been received of his death on August 12.

Kennedy, 29 and a naval aviator, was one of nine children. A brother, Lieut. John Kennedy, was the hero of a thrilling 6-day hide-and-seek escape in the Pacific after a Jap destroyer sliced his P-T boat in two.

Joseph P. Kennedy, jr., was graduated from Harvard cum laude in 1938 with a B. A. degree. He served as private secretary at American embassies in London and Paris in 1938-39. After returning to Harvard Law School he was appointed a naval cadet in October, 1941.

In London it was disclosed that he had been flying on antisubmarine patrols in the Bay of Biscay for six months. He died just as the U-boat menace in this area was coming to an end with the fall of German ports in France.

Another Suspect Freed; Erickson Murder Baffling

A 43-year-old Negro questioned by police as a suspect in the murder of Frances Erickson after he was picked up for annoying a Wave Sunday night and was found to be carrying a knife was released yesterday, according to police, who stated there were no new developments in the case. The knife was within legal limits and the Wave did not press a charge, police said.

Several other persons were held for questioning yesterday, bringing the total number of persons questioned and released to more than 250.

Meanwhile, another $50 was added to the original reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of the 34-year-old architect who was fatally stabbed August 6 in Rock Creek Park. The sum, which brings the reward to $350, was offered by a local merchant whose name was not disclosed.

Hull Wants Talks Free Of Politics

Secretary Reveals Receipt of Soviet Views on Postwar Security Program

By Edward T. Folliard

Secretary of State Hull, returning to his desk yesterday a week in advance of the four-power talks at Dumbarton Oaks, expressed the hope that Americans will continue to treat the matter of a postwar international security plan in a nonpartisan spirit.

Mr. Hull at the same time disclosed that Soviet Russia had forwarded a memorandum giving its views on the proposed organization to keep the world at peace. This remained a secret, but diplomats thought they detected an outline of it in Soviet newspaper articles—articles stressing the active leadership of a well-armed Big Four which could send clouds of warplanes over the capital of a would-be aggressor.

Traces Preparation

Mr. Hull, in the first news conference he has held since he went on a two-week vacation, traced the history of the work that has now led up to the four-power conversations at Dumbarton Oaks. He emphasized that this work, particularly that phase involving conferences with Democratic and Republican members of Congress, had been carried on in what seemed to be a nonpartisan spirit.

He then expressed the hope that this may continue.

His statement, coming at a time when the presidential campaign of 1944 is headed for the ticey stage, was considered significant. It again raised the question of what part, if any, Mr. Hull will play in the campaign.

Want No Repetition

In both major political parties, there are influential men who, remembering the League of Nations fight, hope that this time things will be different; and that politics will end at the water's edge so far as foreign policy is concerned.

Secretary Hull noted that yesterday was the third anniversary of the Atlantic Charter, and he listed some of the "significant advances" that had been made in international collaboration since it was proclaimed in 1941.

"There is sound reason for believing," he said, "that the present effective collaboration of the United Nations, which began in the midst of a terrible war for survival, will be continued and strengthened in the future for the maintenance of peace and security."

British Views Received

The Secretary told reporters that the Russian memorandum on an international security league had arrived at the State Department within the last two days, coming in behind the British memorandum.

Lacking knowledge of what this contained, observers were looking for clews in the government-controlled Russian press. One possible blueprint appeared recently in the Soviet publication, The Star. This called for postwar security based on the active leadership of the Great Powers, each policing a separate, specified region, but acting in concert if resistance requires it.

Another article appeared in a Leningrad magazine, Zvezda, and was signed by N. Malinin—possibly a pen name for some high Soviet official.

This article, while echoing President Roosevelt's disdain for an international police force, attached much importance to an international air force. It said:

"The appearance of several hundred military craft over the capital of a state which was preparing

Neglect Is Alleged

Probe Is Ordered Into Failure Of FWA to Aid D. C. Hospitals

An investigation was ordered by a special subcommittee of the Senate District Committee yesterday to find out why the Federal Works Agency neglected to aid Washington's hospitals during its distribution of Federal funds appropriated under the Lanham Act for relief of war-crowded defense areas.

Orders for the inquiry came at the close of an all-day hearing on a bill providing for the construction here of a huge Government-owned privately operated center with a capacity for 1500 beds.

"I want to find out why, out of the millions of dollars appropriated for administration of the Lanham Act, so little of the money was allocated to the District," declared Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), co-sponsor of the legislation and chairman of the subcommittee. "The Government has done more for rural communities than it has done for the Nation's Capital."

Charles D. Drayton, president of the board of trustees of Children's Hospital and chairman of the District Hospital Association, was authorized to act as an agent for the subcommittee in seeking the information. He also was requested to prepare an estimate of the cost of the proposed hospital center.

One of a half-dozen witnesses who deplored conditions in some of Washington's old and obsolete hospitals, Drayton told the subcommittee of futile efforts to get the

GOP Leaders Oppose House Control Test

Freshman Startles Martin With Drive For Reorganization

By Robert C. Albright

House Republican leaders last night moved to head off an immediate test of the political control of the House after a one-term GOP Congressman dramatically called for a general House reorganization.

The freshman Republican—Representative Ed Rowe of Ohio—had sent letters and telegrams to 204 Republican members of the House when the GOP leadership moved in.

He told newsmen he intends to present a privileged motion for reorganization to the House tomorrow, and will go ahead with his plan, despite leadership opposition, unless stopped by a party caucus.

Martin Hurrying Here

Rowe said he believes Republicans can muster sufficient House votes to establish Republican or "fusion" control of the House and many of its committees for the balance of this session. (The present political division in the House is: Democrats, 216; Republicans, 212; other parties, 4; vacancies, 3.)

Leaders of the House Republican organization almost solidly opposed the move. Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, was reported hurrying back to Washington last night after a long-distance conversation with Rowe. Rowe said Martin urged him first to submit his motion to the House Republican steering committee.

Favors Awaiting Clear Majority

The Ohio one-termer said he will confer with Martin again this morning, but that his present inclination is to proceed with his motion unless a majority of Republicans opposed it in caucus. He added: "Of course I'm not going to stick my neck into a noose. I'd want to know how all our members feel about it."

Martin is known to feel that House Republicans, so close to a

Wave, 3 Men Die as Plane Falls on Ship

2 Midshipmen Killed As Mock Strafer Fails To Pull Out of Dive

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Two midshipmen, a Navy flier and a Wace were killed Saturday off Cove Point, Chesapeake Bay, when a plane crashed into an amphibious type ship carrying members of the plebe class, the Naval Academy announced today.

The plane, from the Patuxent River Naval Air Station, conducting a simulated strafing attack, struck the bow of the ship, hitting the two midshipmen. The plane sank immediately, carrying with it the pilot and Wave, the academy disclosed.

Dead Are Listed

Those killed were:

Lieut. W. T. Witman, 32, pilot, of Seattle, Wash., whose wife lives near Patuxent Air Station.

Louise M. Smith, 24, yeoman second class, Omaha, Nebr.

Midshipman Carroll William Boswinkle, 20, fourth class, Roselawn, Ind.

The public relations office of the Potomac River Naval Command at Washington issued a statement in which it pointed out that simulated strafing attacks are a part of the routine training at the Patuxent River Naval Air Statio and that Waves are permitted to make such flights as a part of their indoctrination.

Part of Maneuvers

The planes, coming in at a rather low altitude, fire blank bullets at the amphibious-type craft in order to give the midshipmen training in repelling such attacks, it was explained. The office said it was not known whether the crash occurred as a result of misjudgment on the pilot's part or whether it was due to a tricky air current or downdraft in which the plane might have been caught.

A Wave who is assigned to a naval air station is granted permission to go along on training flights in order to familiarize herself with aviation, the office said.

De Gaulle Calls for Uprising; French Division in Homeland

Armored Force Led by Le Clerc Aids U. S. Offensive

Committee Urges Patriots to Cut Off Nazis' Escape Paths

Somewhere in France (Delayed) (U.P.).—The French army returned to France today, riding in American tanks—its soldiers laughing, shouting and crying without shame.

They came ashore on the same foggy, windswept beaches where the British and Americans landed a few months ago. They came back to the France many of them had not seen in more than four years—the France they left either as prisoners of the Germans or as refugees.

They are led by one of their greatest fighting men, wiry, nervous Brig. Gen. Jacques LeClerc, who took his pitifully small force of armor across the hot sands of the German-held Sahara Desert from Lake Chad in 1943 to join Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army.

Some were so anxious to go ashore that they jumped overboard and swam to the beach, struggling onto the beaches with hands full of wet sand trickling through their fingers.

Others knelt quietly on the shore,

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 14 (AP).—People of France were summoned today by Gen. Charles de Gaulle's French Committee of National Liberation to strike for their own freedom with a general uprising against the German conquerors, while dispatches from France disclosed that a French division had gone into action.

Calling for an uprising which would be "he prelude of liberation," the committee statement said "there is not one Frenchman who does not feel and who does not know that it is his simple and sacred duty to take part immediately in the supreme war effort of his country."

The French were told to strike with all their might and to harass the enemy by joining the direct war with the Allied armies, by laying down their tools in Nazi held factories and by destruction of small German garrisons.

They were asked to prevent Germans from fleeing through the Pyrenees and east and north to Paris. Special instructions are to be is-

East Prussia Barrier Falls To Red Army

Fortress Captured; Nazi Public Told They Face 'Great Trial of Strength'

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—Gen. G. F. Zakharov's Second White Russian Army today captured the Biebrza River fortress town of Osowiec, 17 miles from the German East Prussian border, and Berlin soberly warned the homeland that "a very great trial of strength" was at hand.

Osowiec, east bank stronghold on the Biebrza, fell as scores of thousands of attacking Russian troops sent the Germans fleeing across the river to roads slashed by the guns of swarming Soviet planes. Another town of the same name, lies on the western side of the stream. The Russians apparently had not yet crossed the Biebrza, but this last water barrier before East Prussia is less of a problem than many larger rivers which the Red army has leaped quickly.

The Soviet communique also announced that Russians racing across southern Estnoia toward the Gulf of Riga had captured 100 localities, including Antsla, which is only 80 miles from the Baltic coast.

Antsla fell in a 19-mile advance from Voru and put the Russians almost half-way across Estonia in their drive to split up possibly 200,000 Germans trapped in Latvia and Estonia. The Soviet units now are only 16 miles from Valga, Latvian-Estonian border city through which runs the Riga-Tallinn Railway—the backbone of German communications in the two countries.

In western Lithuania, the Russians said their troops beat off heavy Nazi counterattacks at Rassainiai.

Northwest and west of Sandomierz, in the area of central Poland where the Russians have established a huge bridgehead west of the Vistula River below Warsaw, the Russians repulsed heavy German tank and infantry counterattacks in the grueling struggle to expand their holdings which already consist of nearly 1500 square miles.

Inside Warsaw the poles said their underground forces still were fighting the Germans in the streets, and Berlin itself told of "mopping up" operations against the poles.

Issuance of New 'A' Gasoline Books Begins This Month

Gas rationing boards throughout the country, with the exception of 17 Eastern States and the District, will begin late this month to issue new "A" coupon books to replace those expiring September 21, it was announced yesterday by the OPA.

The new coupons will be worth four gallons instead of the present value of three, but there will be no increase in the actual gasoline allowed—eight gallons a month.

"A" ration books in the East will expire February 8, 1945.

When the war in Europe is over, he said, "we shall turn much of our fighting force and all our strength and hatred against our enemies in the Pacific. We will wreck them completely and permanently in a military sense."

Big Allied Convoys Indicate New Landings, Nazis Say

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—The German radio, asserting that large Allied convoys were streaming through the Strait of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean, speculated tonight that landings in the south of Europe were imminent.

There was no Allied confirmation of such reports. For three consecutive days, however, strong forces of American heavy bombers from Italy have pounded military installations in southern France. Yugoslav targets have been hit heavily recently.

The Germans spoke of possible landings in southern France, on the islands of Greece and of new incursions in Italy above the Gothic Line, which Allied land forces now are approaching.

The appearance of Prime Minister Churchill in Italy clearly created anxiety in Berlin.

Churchill's talks with Marshal Tito, the Yugoslav patriot army commander, appeared to Berlin to be concerned chiefly with impending military action.

Single Robot Buries Bodies In 2 Shelters

Nazis Claim Weapon Of Great Range for Land and Sea Use

London, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Haphazard launching of German flying bombs against Britain's civilian population continued today even as Nazi propaganda officials boasted of a new and more terrifying weapon which could be fired from great distances and even from ships at sea.

During bright sunshine in southern England, a robot bomb swooped from the sky to explode against two adjoining Anderson air-raid shelters. Three bodies were recovered and workers digging through the wreckage of the shelters and adjoining houses said it was probable that many more had been killed.

An unidentified German official told neutral correspondents, according to dispatches received in London, that the "V-2," described as a more powerful counterpart of the "V-1," now being used, was "now ready" and that it soon would be used by both the German army and navy.

The new weapons, the unidentified spokesman said, are not a variation of the flying bomb but are "a completely new and absolutely secret weapon." It could be used from an unlimited distance as well as by ships at sea, he added.

Although the weapon was described as being ready for use, the official was quoted as saying that the Germans were awaiting a propitious opportunity—"the supreme tactical moment"—for its use.

Allies Close Gigantic Pincers on 7th Army

U. S. 3d Credited With Triumphant Sweep in South; Yanks Near Falaise

BULLETIN

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Tuesday), Aug. 15 (AP).—The 100,000 to 200,000 troops of the German Seventh Army halted their desperate bomb and artillery-harrassed flight from the Allied trap west of Paris and turned for a battle to the death.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 14 (AP).—The jaws of a giant Allied pincers closed on the GermanK Seventh Army tonight, presagnig the mightiest victory of the Western front, as Americans from the south and Canadians from the north narrowed the Nazi escape corridor to less than 12 miles and sealed off that gap with a tremendous artillery barrage.

From 100,000 to 200,000 Germans writhed within the trap as the Amercans' smashing onslaught hammreed northward to within 8½ miles of Falaise. At the same time the Canadians swarmed through the first Nazi defense line and into the second, 3½ miles north of Falaise.

Credit Given Third Army

Disclosure was made at the same time of the presence in France of the United States Third Army, credited with this spectacular sweep closing the southern pincers of the giant trap west of Paris. The same army also was credited, within the last two weeks, with cutting off the Brest Peninsula. The identity of the commander of the Third Army still was withheld, however.

(Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, military commentator for the Nazi propaganda agency Transocean News, said Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., was leading the Third Army in France. He added that "fresh German reserves have been thrown against Patton's tank formations and fierce fighting is under way south and southwest of Alencon." German broadcasts a week ago identified the Third Army as being in action.)

Escape Route Saturated

The enemy's escape route from the trap west of Paris was being saturated with bombs and shells ahead of the hard-drivng Canadian, British and American offensives.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, working under pressure reminiscent of climactic days in Tunisia and Sicily, issued an order of the day asserting the great battle spelled "a definite opportunity for a major Allied victory"—destruction of the Seventh Army, after which Paris could fall with little effort.

By haywagon, bicycle and any farm vehicle he could seize, the enemy was in fast but fairly orderly retreat toward the Seine River flowing north from Paris, with no indication he could rally for a stand before the river barrier in the hurricane of Allied bombs and bullets.

Bent on closing the gap, Americans surrounded Argentan and struck on north toward Falaise, now less than 12 miles away.

Canadians swept south toward Falais after a saturation raid by RAF heavy bombers that shattered strong enemy defenses, were within four miles of the anchor city and driving steadily ahead.

One force was near Sassy, only two miles from the Falaise-Lisieux rd., sole good route to the Seine still open to the enemy.

Would Mean Army's Doom

Should these forces join before the bulk of the Seventh Army squeezes out, the doom of the German Seventh army will be sealed, the campaign of northwestern France will be won, and triumphant Allied armies can turn for the destruction of three other enemy armies lying uneasily in wait in northeastern and southern France.

"It will be a military miracle if the Germans got out anywhere near whole," an Allied staff officer

An American Thunderbolt Base, France, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Pilots at this field gasped with amazement when Charles E. Rife and Richard Kik, jr., returned from a recent mission with the odds all against them.

When they landed, Rife took off his parachute and a shell fragment dropped to the ground. He pulled off his jacket and another fragment fell out. A third piece was lodged in the flesh of his left shoulder, and a flight surgeon removed it.

When Kik alighted he still had his bombs. He looke dat one of them and saw a flak hole in it.

Why the bomb did not explode no one knows.

He added that Merle Oberon, Vivien Leigh, Margaret Lockwood and June Duprez, all film actresses, were born in India.

Push to Adriatic Continues Slowly; Florence Quits Down

Rome, Aug. 14 (AP).—Eighth Army troops inching toward the Adriatic end on the Germans' Gothic Line in Italy have captured the mountain town of Frontone on the north bank of the Cesano River 27 miles from the sea, Allied headquarters announced today.

This was the only significant ground action along the Italian front, where Allied authorities devoted their major effort to the relief of the hungry and thirsty civil population of Florence. The Allied military government reported 450 tons of food already had been distributed.

Within the city clashes between Italian patriots and Fascists, which had brought much indiscriminate shooting, tapered off to occasional sniping.

Allied headquarters disclosed that Nazi Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring had issued a pamphlet declaring vigorous punishment would be meted out to Italian civilians attacking German supply and communication lines behind the front. Shooting will be the penalty for aiding "bandits," the pamphlets said.

HOSPITAL

Lanham Act funds to carry the "almost overwhelming load" placed on the hospitals by the wartime population. On the advice of members of Congress, he said, the appeal was carried to the War Production Board and there Maury Maverick and two of his aides made those interested in the move for financial relief "feel pretty small" when told the hospitals were not making the best use of available facilities—"that many more beds could be provided in existing space."

Acute Needs Cited

Conditions in several of the antiquated hospitals which were said to be beyond the state of modernization and rehabilitation were stressed by the witnesses to show the acute need of the proposed modern medical center. There were tsories of rats an dvermin in kitchens and pantries, potential fire hazards that cannot be remedied, patients lying almost cheek-to-cheek in crowded wards, and the lack o fadequate equipment which in one instance necessitated the delivery of a baby on a mattress stretched across a bathtub.

The hearing disclosed that Garfield, one of the two hospitals forming the nucleus of the proposed center, would be scrapped under the plan and that Emergency, the oaher, would be maintained as a casualty station.

Calling attention to a provision in the bill requiring the Federal Government to bear the entire cost of the projevt, Senator Harold H. Burton (R., Ohio) suggested that the possibility of District participation be "weighed." "Here you have the District entirely out of something in which the District is interested," he said. "Maybe its share of the cost should be smaller than that of the Federal Government."

Major Large Employer

Drayton argued that since the Federal Government is substantially the only large major employer here it should bear the cost to maintain employe morale. In most large cities comparable with Washington, he said, opulent citizens have made large donations for large hospital-building. That situation, however, he declared, does not exist here because "so large a part of the population is comprised of Government workers and colored people many of whom do not even have the capacity to pay their own way for hospitalization."

Mrs. Warren S. Barbour, widow of the late Senator from New Jersey, who worked for a year and a half as a nurse's aide in three Washington hospitals, described conditions she had observed and declared: "Only through the goodness of God we haven't had an epidemic."

Tells of Timid Approach

Although the legislation paves the way for all private hospitals to participate or become affiliated with the proposed hospital center, G. Thomas Dunlop, vice president of Garfield, revealed that some of the institutions had approached the plan "timidly" because he said they don't know where they will get off." He remarked it would be a "pity" if the plan failed because of their lack of cooperation.

J. D. Capossela, superintendent of Emergency declared Washington is in "dire need" of modern hospital facilities, at the same time pointing out that his institution is in "fair physical condition."

Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of Garfield, and Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey said the proposed center would be the best solution to Washington's hospital problem. And Willard C. Smith, administrator of the Health Security Administration, described the plan as "a bold stroke in the right direction."

This call to Frenchmen came with announcement that French troops, commanded by Gen. Jacques LeClerc, veteran of North Africa, were in action against the Germans on their home soil for the first time since France capitulated in 1940. These forces, forming the Second French Armored Division, have been fighting alongside the Americans. In their first clash with the enemy in metropolitan France they gave a brilliant account of themselves, according to a dispatch from France.

Their commander assumed the name of LeClerc to prevent German reprisals against relatives or friends in France.

declared. "This is the end of a German army."

On the battlefront, the only question was how many troops the Allied armies could kill or catch and how many the enemy could withdraw across the Seine to fight again.

Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of the First American Army, expressed confidence most of the Germans would be unable to get away.

Rearguards Mowed Down

The British Second Army on the north and the American First on the west were in hot pursuit, mowing down rearguards by the hundreds and swarming through positions abandoned so recently that machine-guns still smoked and belts still were loaded with bullets.

The Americans striking from Mortain—site of Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's folly, the attempt to break through the Normandy - Brittany corridor — drove east 7 to 12 miles. The Germans were abandoning their dead and had no time to dig in behind hedgerows.

The doughboys took Barenton, six miles east of Mortain, and recaptured Domfront, 8 miles farther on in a drive toward the east while other Allied troops coming down from the north captured St. Martin de Chaulieu in a 2-mile advance below Vire.

The sound of heavy explosions came from the nearby forest, as though the enemy was blowing up ammunition stores and supply dumps.

4 Divisions Near Carrouges

The Germans said that between this sector and Argenton, the Americans had pressed north to the area of Carrouges, and were blocking with four divisions any attempt for a breakout of the pocket on the south.)

Before the British Second Army to the northwest, enemy tanks were disappearing from what remained of the German bulge across the Orne River, a front dispatch said, as Von Kluge tried desperately to extricate his most valuable armored units.

Some of these withdrew under cover of night and in small convoys, but they were bady shot up by Allied Air Forces.

The British seized Proussy, only 2 miles north of the German rallying point of Conde-sur-Noireau, which is 15 miles west of Falaise, thus drawing ever tighter the lines about the enemy.

Patrols moving due west of this sector stabbed to within 3 miles north of the stronghold of Vassy, and a short distance farther west the village of Estrey fell to the British after a week's battle.

Other British units strikin in concert with the Canadians above pivotal Falaise scored a 3-mile advance and after capturing Martainville pushed on near Bonnoeil, 7 miles northwest of Falaise.

"fairly large" amount of civilian production will be made available in loose labro markets.

NAM expressed the belief that "local pressures and local knowledge of manpower surpluses would be sufficient to obtain the needed certification of 'labor available' from the local WMC official, regardless of other factors."

Manufacturers who propose to make items out of idle and excess materials or who plan to make goods urgently needed tby the civilian econom, will have the best chance of getting their program approved, WPB indicated.

Preference Rating

A preference rating of AA-5 will be assigned to the production of items listed by the WPB Office of Civilian Reqqirements as "utility items of importance in civilian requirements." The OCR list parallels the list of the more than 75 classes of items which may be made, but is somewhat more restrivtice.

"In general," WPB ruled," more favorable consideration will be given in applications where the articles can be produced from idle, excess, or frozen materials and components, whether in the applicant's inventory or available from others, than where new materials and components are required."

Because of the shortage of fractional horsepower electric motors, it was doubted that any production of items requiring small motors would be possible for some time.

The WPB will assist manufacturers in uncovering idle and excess materials.

Another feature of the reconversion step provides for the establishment of authorized production schedules for approved items. Thus, aproved civilian production will be scheduled along wit the war program.

aggression could not but produce an appropriate impression. And if such a demonstration proved to be without results, this could lead to the bombardment of definite military objectives of the aggressive state."

Discussed at Teheran

At the Teheran Conference, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin are known to have talked about such use of air power.

The Leningrad magazine agreed that the new world organization should have a council controlled by the Great Powers, and an assembly that would include all members of the organization. In addition, however, it suggested "special individual treaties" among the big powers.

Elasticity Recommended

"In these treaties," the article continued, "there must be defined as precisely as possible the role of each power in extinguishing this or that center of aggresion. This role, of course, will not be the same for each power in each case, and will depend on a number of political, geographical and strategic conditions, but at the same time their mutual aid to one another in any action for safeguarding peace must be assured in one degree or another."

The article said that the old League of Nations fell into "political bankruptcy" large because of "a lack of armed forces for carrying its decisions into effect."

Restaurant Loses Liquor License Injunction Plea

The Showboat restaurant at 1303 H st. nw., was denied in District Court yesterday an injunction order which it sought to prevent revocation of its liquor license by the District Commissioners.

Justice Matthew F. McGuire did not affix his signature to the court order, however, and until he does so, the restaurant will still be permitted to sell alcoholic beverages.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board issued the revocation order to be effective July 29, on grounds that drinks on two different occasions were sold by the restaurant to minors.

Harry Lambros and George Sachlis, operators, appealed the order to the commissioners, who sustained it.

The tanks and halftracks which lumbered onto French soil had small Tricolors and the Cross of Lorraine painted on their sides. Each was labeled with such familiar French names as Ile de France, Valois, Tardenois, Santerre and Calvados. One unit had each of its Sherman tanks named after a Paris park.

There were no Frenchmen to greet LeClerc when he led his troops ashore on the American beachhead, but citizens of liberaed towns on the way to the front were there when the long column rolled down the highways.

Word of the French army's arrival spread like wildfire, and at each town, each village and crossroad there were Frenchmen watching with unbelieving, tearfilled eyes the sight many of them thought would never occur—the return of a French army to fight for its native land.

The troops, resplendent in their American GI outfits, tried at first to maintain some military bearing, but streams of tears trickled down their dusty, begrimed faces—and they laughed, shouted, waved and wept with the civilians. All order disappeared in the joy of returning home.

Allies Closing Trap

Bradley Leads All U. S. Forces In France

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 14 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley was disclosed tonight as overall commander of the whole American fighting force in France, which includes, besides the original First Army, a new Third Army, which the Germans have said is commanded by Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr.

The Allied announcement made no reference to the commander of the Third Army, officially disclosed tonight for the first time to have been in action in France and to have effected the cuto of the Brest Peninsula and the spectacular sweep northward from Le Mans, closing a trap on the German Seventh Army.

Bradley's former place as commander of the First Army was taken by Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, who previously commanded a U. S. Army corps in France.

Two other commanders were identified—Maj. Gen. Edward H. Brooks as leader of the Second Armored Division, and Maj. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, head of the Fifteenth Corps.

With the two full armies disclosed in action, the United States has in France the greatest fighting force ever massed in battle under the American flag—and Bradley has the greatest battle comand.

How the whole Allied fighting structure in France fitted together still was not disclosed fully.

There was no indication of any solely American Army Group, and thus, for the moment at least, two American armies apparently still come under the original Twenty-first Army Group.

That left Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the Twenty-first Army Group, still officially chief deputy in the field of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander.

However, the British-Canadian components of that Army group had no announced parallel in an overall commander, such as Bradley's new position, except for Montgomery. A recent dispatch from Eisenhower's advanced command port in France referred to his conferences "with British and American" field commanders.

This was the breakdown, so far as announced — obviously with much to be filled in:

Under General Eisenhower, Montgomery heads the Twenty-first Army grouy, the only Army group in the field.

Under it are the Canadian First Army, with Lieut. Gen. H. D. G. Crerar in command, and the British Second Army command by Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey; and on the American side, with Bradley in charge, are Hodges' First Army and the Third Army of "General X."

Man Shoots Manager Of Business Bureau

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 14 (AP).—Homer E. Frye, manager of the Columbus Better Business Bureau, was shot and wounded critically in an office building today by a man who then killed himself.

Police identified the dead man as E. S. Phillips, about 60, owner of the National Adjustment Collection Agency. Police said the shooting followed discussion of "complaints" against the collection firm.

Woman Found Slain

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—The body of a Negro woman, about 30, the throat slashed, was found in Jones Falls today by City Patrolman Samuel E. Kelly. Police said the body apparently had been in the water a day or two.

Three Recovering From Fire Injuries

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—Three firemen being treated at General Hospital here for injuries suffered in fighting the fire which destroyed the Maple Lane Bowling Alleys Saturday afternoon were reported today to be "doing nicely."

Fire damage was estimated at $80.000.

Lieut. Governor Fined

Detroit, Aug. 14 (AP).—Dr. Eugene C. Keyes, Michigan's Lieutenant Governor, was convicted by Judge George A. Belding in Dearborn Municipal Court today of assault and battery. He was ordered to pay a $25 fine or serve 15 days in the city jail.

Dr. Keyes was accused of pushing Mrs. Ethel Vetovich out of his office when she came to inquire about her son's assertion that he had been slapped earlier by Dr. Keyes in an argument over the amount of campaign literature the boy had folded.

Pvt. Otis C. Gormah, son of Mrs. Evelyn Carter, route 4, Alexandria.

Private Grady, 32, landed in France on D-Day and was in active fighting until killed on July 11. An employe of the Navy Yard for 10 years before entering the service, he went overseas with the 29th Division more than two years ago. In addition to his parents he is survived by six sisters and a brother, Pvt. Maurice Jerome Grady, serving with the Ninety-ninth Division.

Colonel Simpson, a life-long resident of Chevy Chase, was reported missing on July 19 over France while on an aerial mission to check targets. He recently was promoted to a wing commander. The 32-year-old officer was wounded last June and had been decorated with the Purple Heart medal.

A graduate of McKinley High School and the University of Maryland, he was employed by the FBI before joining the Air Forces in 1938. His wife, the former Miss June Barnsley, and their 3-year-old son, Robert, live at Olney, Md.

Missing in Atlantic

Boatswain's Mate Holland, 22, has been reported missing in action in the Atlantic. A native of Montvale, Va., where his mother, Mrs. Ottie Holland, lives, he moved to Alexandria in 1940 and was employed by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. as a linesman. Trained at Bainbridge, Md., and Norfolk, Va., he sailed to England last October. In his last letter home, dated May 12, he wrote that he was helping construct a naval base.

Colonel Hall, assistant chief of staff for Lieut. Gen. Lewis H. Breteton, commander of the Ninth Air Force, was wounded by machine-gun fire in Normandy, July 5. Formerly associated with the Export Income Bank and the Curtiss Wright Corp., he was a consultant with the Civil Aeronautics when he entered the Army in November, 1942. Prior to his overseas assignment he served here with the Combined Chiefs of Staff. Colonel Hall saw active duty in the first World War and was decorated by the British, French and Belgian governments.

Lieutenant Young, 31-year-old infantry officer, was wounded June 24 while serving in New Guinea. The son of the late James Young for 47 years superintendent at Mount Vernon, he was born in the District and attended St. John's High School an dthe University of Virginia.

majority that in combination with conservative Democrats they frequently exert actual control, should wait until they receive a clear working majority before they consider taking over House organization.

Representative Ben F. Jensen (R., Iowa), acting GOP leader in Martin's absence, expressed a simllar view. He said he had not conferred with Rowe, "because until I received his letter I had not taken the proposal seriously."

Jensen predicted Republicans will win a House majority of about 40 votes in the November election and organize the House in the following Congress. If they register a majority, "even if it is only a majority of one," in special elections before that time, he said it would "be our responsibility to reorganize the House. But Jensen joined other ranking Republicans in opposing a premature test, and predicted nothing would come of Rowe's move.

Rowe told reporters he was not necessarily proposing a Republican Speaker at this time—"We might very well reelect Speaker Rayburn and reorganize only a few of the committees. Since neither party has a numerical majority, we might even establish fus ion control for the rest of the session. My point is that there have been so many changes since the last election that the time has come for the House to pass on its own organization so we will know just who is in control."

Md. Canning Workers To Get Overtime Pay

Philadelphia, Aug. 14 (AP).—Payment of time and a half for overtime work, effective as of May 29, has been approved by the Regional War Labor Board for approximately 800 hourly rated workers employed in the processing and canning of vegetables and United States Army K rations at the Phillips Packing Co., Inc., plants, Cambridge, Md.

The overtime rate will be paid for all work in excess of 40 hours in any one week and eight hours in any one day.

Slot Operator Fined $50 in State Drive

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—In the first case to be prosecuted in Governor Darden's campaign against slot machines, C. E. Lambert of Woodstock, was fined $50 and costs in Loudoun County Trial Justice Court today. He was specifically charged with unlawful possession of nine slot machines seized by Virginia State police at the Middleburg Firemen's Carnival, August 5.

T. Nelson Parker, Richmond attorney designated by the Governor to direct the campaign, appeared for the State at the hearing conducted by Trial Justice W. A. Metzger. The fine asked by Justice Metzger was the minimum which could be imposed under the law.

Asked to Bring Slots

Three citizens of Shenandoah County—including the sheriff and a former Commonwealth's attorney—testified at the hearing as character witnesses for Lambert, who said it was the first time he had used the machines in over three years. Stanley Wilson and Dabney Simpson, leaders in the Middleburg company of volunteers, testified that they had asked Lambert to bring the machines to the carnival.

The testimony was that he was to receive 40 per cent of the take, with the remainder going to the fire company, but that there had been no division of the money before the machines were seized.

The nickel variety machines were ordered left in the custody of the Loudoun sheriff pending some possible appeal to the governor in the matter. Lambert did not formally note an appeal from the trial justice's action.

Sponsored by Darden

Governor Darden, in announcing this summer that he would sponsor a drive against slot machines, said the campaign would be a continued and persistent one devoid of sensationalism. The plan was that State Police and State ABC inspectors could be used in the campaign.

The seizure at Middleburg was made by Lieut. C. W. Carr and Sergt. C. W. Blue of the Virginia State Police.

Md. Dean Appeals Army's Dropping Of Dental Program

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—The dean of the University of Maryland Dental School said today he had appealed to the Secretary of War to reconsider the Army's plan to curtail Army special training program college dental studies because the action "seriously threatens the oral health care for the American people."

Dr. J. Ben Robinson said "the hurried discontinuance of the Army program will leave the dental students in a confused financial situation and will materially reduce dental enrollments in all the schools."

He termed "unjust, ill-advised and harmful" the projected abolition of the program scheduled to end at the University of Maryland August 26 when the freshman class completes its year's work.

Dr. Robinson said that approximately 200 students would be forced to give up their studies and present enrollments would be thrown "into chaos."

Va. Legion to Hear Judge Johnson

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 14 (Spl.).—Judge J. Fred Johnson, candidate for national commander at the Chicago national convention in September, will be the principal speaker at the annual State convention of the American Legion which opens next Sunday in Roanoke.

Judge Randolph G. Whittle of Richmond, will be the guest speaker at the child welfare luncheon Sunday afternoon, and at the past commanders' dinner at 6:30, State Senator Robert O. Norris will be the speaker.

At the convention's opening business session Monday morning, the legionnaires will be welcomed by Mayor Edward M. Imlay and Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, after which they will hear an address by Edward N. Scheiberling of New York, past department commander. The department grand ball will get under way at 10 o'clock.

60 Md. Boys Start Stay at 4-H Camp

Colora, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Sixty Maryland boys who have done outstanding work in forestry conservation began today a five-day stay at the State 4-H Club conservation camp at West Nottingham Academy.

State conservation officials, aided by a staff of specialists in nature study, bird study, forestry, fishing, soil consehvation, and wildlife conservation and recreation, are assisting Harry W. Dengler, extension forester in charge of the camp. Successful completion of the course will entitle all campers to membership in the U. S. Forest Fire Fighter Service.

'Semper Paratus'

Consolidation Plan to Affect 357 Schools

Richmond, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—All save 21 of Virginia's 378 rural high schools would be consolidated if a recommendation made by Governor Darden's school merger committee were adopted, a study of enrollment figures showed today.

The committee, headed by Raymond V. Long, said that high schools, "generally speaking," should not attempt to operate with an enrollment of less than 360.

The last annual report of the State superintendent of public instruction shows only 21 rural high schools and 30 of the 44 city high schools have enrollments of more than this figure.

Long said the enrollment criteria was one of four employed by the committee in its study. The group said that no permanent physical plant improvements should be undertaken for high schools where at least 360 students cannot be enrolled, and it was recommended that plans should be aimed at ultimate consolidation to bring about this minimum attendance.

It also was recommended that county boundaries should be given only secondary consideration in the consolidation of elementary schools; that small elementary schools be consolidated into units of not less than four rooms, and that transportation of elementary pupils should be limited to 8 or 10 miles and for high school pupils to 25 miles.

Of the 378 rural high schools, 353 have enrollments of less than 300.

Farmer Kills Self

Denton, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Elmer Bibble Crouse, 56, a farmer near Ridgely, Md., shot and killed himself today, Deputy Medical Examiner Dr. Dawson O. George reported. Dr. George said that Crouse had been in ill health for some time.

Autopsy Awaited In Third Mystery Death in Va. City

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—A third death here from undetermined causes within the last several days occurred today when Percival Norwood Campbell, 40, an employe of Solvay Co. in Hopewell, died this morning a short time after being found in a dazed condition.

Dr. W. L. Barnes, city coroner, planned to perform an autopsy.

Campbell was found near an ice company here and was taken by police to a hospital, where he died about 7:30 a. m.

Coroner Barnes has performed autopsies on the bodies of Mrs. Gracie S. Wood and her husband, Vernon B. Wood, both 45, of Petersburg, who died Saturday. The coroner withheld any verdict pending analysis of specimens taken from the stomachs of the couple and sent to Richmond.

The police sergeant said the Woods had been committed to the local jail for failure to pay fines of $10 each imposed on them in police court on charges of being intoxicated.

U. S. to Establish Virginia Camp for Boy Delinquents

Buena Vista, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—A camp for Federal juvenile offenders from 16 to 18 years old will be established by the Federal Bureau of Prisons in cooperation with the U. S. Forest Service at Greenle, Rockbridge County, in buildings formerly used by the CCC in Jefferson National Park. The camp will accommodate approximately 60 boys who will be given work on forestry projects.

It was said here that the camp for juveniles would be an innovation in the Federal prison system, being the first such unit. Several such camps for adults are now operated by the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

City-Counties Feud Revived By Legislators

BULLETIN

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—Four proposed constitutional amendments to delegate to the county commissioners powers now held by the General Assembly were made a special order of business for the October Legislative Council meeting by unanimous vote of the council today. The decision followed a hectic controversial session.

By Fred W. Stabley

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—Four proposed constitutional amendments which would confer on county commissioners powers now held by the General Assembly met vigorous opposition from a bloc of county legislators in the Legislative Council today.

Battle-lines for another possible feud between Baltimore city and county legislators were formed as Senator Wilmer Fell Davis (R. Caroline) and Speaker of the House John S. White (D. Prince Georges) led the fight against council sponsorship of the measures while Senators Wilmer C. Carter (D. Balto. 3rd) and Joseph R. Byrnes (D. Balto. 5th) advocated their adoption.

White Aroused

It was White who brought the factional feeling into the open when he asserted that nothing in recent history was more damaging to Baltimore city's chances of getting representation in the General Assembly proportionate to its population than the amendments being considered.

"Let us run our counties; you run your city," he shouted. "We think we've got a better system of government in Prince Georges County right now than you have in Baltimore City."

The amendments, which legislative leaders said were aimed primarily at eliminating last minute legislative jams in the General Assembly by removing much local legislation from the agenda, would:

Give the county commissioners power to fix salaries of county employes, purchase and sell real estate, fix compensation and expenses of the orphans' courts and sheriffs' offices and prohibit the introduction of new bills within 20 days of the end of the legislative session rather than the present 10-day deadline.

Would Aid Baltimore

City Senators Byrnes and Carter said they felt the measures, drawn up by a committee headed by Senate President and Council Chairman James J. Lindsay (D., Baltimore County), would improve Baltimore City's local situation and would greatly facilitate the work of the General Assembly.

They quoted figures to show that in the last week of the 1943 General Assembly session 352 bills of a local character were acted upon. Carter asked White if he thought that a healthy condition, meantime admitting that he himself had little knowledge of what was in most of them.

White voiced the opinion that local legislation, even of minor significance was of importance to good government.

To Byrnes' statement that the Prince Georges County commissioners wanted the amendments, White countered that it was reasonable for anyone offered more power to accept it.

White also claimed the amendments would open the door to the charter form of government in the counties, while Lindsay asserted they would have exactly the opposite affect.

To White's suggestion that the council refrain from putting its stamp of approval on anything so controversial unless a "responsible vote" could be obtained and not after "an 8-6 vote," Lindsay said he felt the council would lose prestige by avoiding controversial issues and would be "shirking its duty."

State Proposes Modernizing of Berkeley Springs

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 14 (Spl.).—Expenditures totaling $400,000 for modernization of the park and baths as a postwar project is planned for this summer resort, according to a statement of Robert F. Roth of the West Virginia Department of Public Assistance.

According to plans drawn by L. D. Schmidt, architect, of Fairmont, W. Va., a main swimming pool will be built at a cost of $195,000 and the present medicinal baths will be enlarged to four times their present capacity, with adequate attendants. It is planned to raze the old Roman baths building and a wading pool for children will be erected on that site.

Berkeley Springs, seat of Morgan County, was established in 1776 under the name of Ye Towne of Bathe, which is still its corporate name, although the postoffice name of Berkeley Springs is more generally used. Noted for its medicinal springs, now owned by the State, it has been patronized as a health resort since colonial times.

GOP Faction Hit as Seeking Byrd Favors

By the Associated Press

John Locke Green, Arlington County treasurer and a supporter of I. R. Dovel, Republican State chairman, whose resignation has been asked by the GOP State executive committee, charged yesterday that the "Byrd machine" is "neither Democratic nor Republican" and "perfectly willing to do business with Republicans who are subservient to it."

The charge, directed at Senator Harry Byrd and the State Democratic organization of which he is acknowledged leader, was made by Green today in a lengthy statement principally devoted to a charge that the Virginia Republican faction led by Maj. Henry Wise of Albemarle is mainly interested in patronage instead of winning Virginia to the Republican cause.

Two Factions in Drive

Dovel, Luray attorney, has refused the request of the State committee that he resign as chairman, and said at Luray Sunday that a permanent State headquarters would be opened immediately and full-time workers placed in the field. This apparently posed a question for Virginia Republicans as to which faction would lead the State fight for the Dewey-Bricker ticket. The executive committee last week gave direction of the State presidential campaign to Clarence A. Ahalt of Arlington, a leader in the Wise group.

Green's statement was made in answer to a request from the Richmond News-Leader for "the real reason for the present disturbance within the Republican Party of Virginia."

"Let me say at this time that Dovel is not going to resign under any conditions," Green said . . . "Dovel represents the element of the Republican Party which has sought for several years to build up a live, progressive organization, which has for its end better government than that which we are now receiving at the hands of the Byrd machine.

Byrd "Machine" Hit

"We look upon the Byrd machine as neither Democratic nor Republican. The Byrd machine, in some places where the Republicans are numerous, is perfectly willing to do business with Republicans who are subservient to it, but on the other hand, where Republicans are less numerous and constitute a small minority, the Byrd machine rides ruthlessly over them.

"Major Wise, a wealthy New York lawyer, who now hold his legal address at Albemarle County, is in fact the leader of the little handful of the Republican Party, which is opposed to progress and is against any move that might eventually build a real two-party government. This little group of self-styled leaders seems to be satisfied to let the Republicans win nationally and it is immaterial whether Virginia goes Republican or Democratic, so far as they are concerned. Once the national Republican administration is in, it is this Wise group which wants to control the Federal jobs in Virginia."

Green said Major Wise told Dovel at Charlottesville in 1936 after the defeat of Landon "to go back to Luray and practice law, and forget about ever trying to build the Republican Party in Virginia, and to wait until it came into power nationally and then get some patronage."

Fire Destroys Unison School

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 14 (Spl.).—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the Unison grade school building in upper Loudoun County on Saturday night. Erected in 1916 of frame and stucco, the building contained six schoolrooms and an auditorium.

All contents burned, including next winter's coal supply. The loss is covered by insurance, according to Superintendent of Schools O. L. Emerick.

This is the second Loudoun County school building to be destroyed by fire this year, the Ashburn school having burned in February.

Lookout Is Broadcast On Stolen Canada Cash

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 14 (AP). Sheriff J. Howard Myers sent out a broadcast today that anyone noticing Canadian money in the channels of trade should scrutinize the bearer closely.

The money probably is the property of the Rev. Thomas Johnstone, Canadian evangelist, whose pockets were rifled while he was swimming in the Potomac River.

The Rev. Mr. Thomas, conducting services near Williamsport, Md., reported he lost $300 and a gold watch. About $220 was in Canadian currency, he said.

Legion Group Declares Untrue Charges of Prisoner 'Coddling'

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—John W. Jennings Baltimore railroad accountant, embarked on a year's tenure as commander of the Maryland Department of the American Legion today, pledged to concentrate on the needs of newly returned war veterans and a program of rehabilitation.

Jennings, who said he was "too eager to get down to the big job ahead to bask in the sunshine," was elected State commander over two rivals before the legion adjourned its three-day, twenty-sixth annual convention yesterday.

Prior to the election of officers, the convention heard a report from a committee of 17 legionnaires who said an inspection of prisoner of war facilities at Fort George G. Meade "convinces us that charges of coddling are absolutely untrue."

The committee visited Meade at the invitation of Maj. Gen. Philip Hayes, Third Service Command head, after Fort Cumberland Post No. 13 had offered a resolution protesting what it called too easy treatment of prisoners.

The convention had approved this resolution on Saturday while the committee was at the Army post, and took no action yesterday to rescind its approval.

Another resolution, refused floor consideration on Saturday on the grounds it was not in proper form, was adopted without debate. It originated with the Walter Green Post No. 14 of Baltimore and asked for appointment of a National Legion committee to educate the American public against racial intolerance.

Delegates to the national convention to be held in Chicago in September were instructed to seek approval of the resolution there.

Other officers elected at the concluding session of the convention were: Godfrey Childs, Pocomoke City, national executive committeeman; Harry Feihe, Towson, alternate national executive committeeman; Paul B. Milburn, Baltimore, department treasurer; David W. Sloan, Cumberland, department judge advocate; Adolph Decker, Glenburnie, sergeant at arms; the Rev. Dr. John C. Moore, Baltimore, chaplain; Herbert Schloss, Baltimore, historian.

Milburn and the Rev. Dr. Moore were unanimously reelected to their positions.

The American Legion auxiliary, which simultaneously held meetings, elected and installed these officers:

Mrs. Norman E. Horn, president, Baltimore; Mrs. Giles Lewis, Odenton, treasurer; Mrs. Roman Schmechel, Perryville, chaplain; Mrs. John Long, Cumberland, historian; Mrs. J. Frank Lynch, Hagerstown, sergeant at arms; Mrs. Margaret Shallenberger, Baltimore, alternate national executive committeewoman.

Wheat Storage Bins Jammed In Md. Area

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—Wheat growers reported today that a backlog of 9,900,000 bushels of wheat in storage in the Baltimore area may cause thousands of bushels of wheat grown in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware this year to be wasted because of lack of storage space.

Lack of transportation facilities and curtailed shipments abroad were given as other reasons for the refusal of railroads to haul more grain to elevators still loaded with last year's crop.

Embargo in Effect

Railroad executives reported that it has been necessary for them to exercise an embargo on movements of wheat from growing points to storage points, except when special permits were issued.

One railroad official explained that "the demand for storage at seaboard, in the interests of movement of grain to the war areas, has placed a great burden upon storage facilities at port. Coincident with his, the production of grain in the local areas is in excess of normal."

He added that bumper crops in the Carolinas and in Pennsylvania have placed on the Maryland-Delaware farmer the burden of finding storage space for grain ordinarily shipped out.

Much Face Waste

One estimate as to the total amount of wheat which might go to waste was more than a million bushels, at a loss of at least $1,500,000.

Included in the backlog are American grain stored to the account of the Commodities Credit Corporation; Canadian grain stored to the deposit of the British Ministry of Food and American grain originating in local areas.

Farm Exhibit Opens At Cumberland Fair

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—A total of $2000 in cash premiums was offered exhibitors today at the opening of the 27th annual agricultural exhibition of the Cumberland Fair Association, Inc.

Wednesday will be Cumberland Day and a record breaking crowd is expected to attend. Several records have already been set at the fair races, including a record in total money put through the pari-mutuel machines.

"Home, James"

Many of Washington's private chauffeurs have gone to war.

Quite a number of residents who were accustomed to saying "Home, James" now board street cars and buses when they go shopping between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Also, of course, thousands of self-chauffeur automobile riders have changed to Capital Transit service for the duration.

These groups, along with the thousands of out-of-towners here because of the war, are factors in making the job of transporting wartime Washington the problem that it is.

Many of them tell us that they appreciate our problem. They know that we're carrying more than one million passengers daily. They know that many operators are new. So they try to be helpful. By observing the "transit courtesies"—moving to the rear—and in various other ways, they give evidence of their sincerity, for which we are grateful.

That Davy Jones! Wouldn't give me any information about the pirate treasure... A fine friend, indeed—
Maybe he doesn't know about it...
Nonsense. He admitted he had a complete file on all treasures. Said it was confidential... As if I can't be trusted! Me! Old "Silent" O'Malley, the Sphinx—
And as if I need Davy prattling away with a lot of advice! There's been too much talk already about our treasure expedition! Mum's the word from now on, m'boy. We'll do the job silently and secretly, in the dead of night—
In the dark?
It won't be TOO dark... The newsreel people I've invited to film the dramatic event always set up floodlights...

A Remarkable Film

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 14.—Since "Going My Way" is a smash and "Song of Bernadette" a success, Metro will produce as one of its biggest pictures Archbishop Spellman's "The Arisen Soldier.' . . . Remember Adela Rogers St. John's "A Free Soul," which did so much for Clark Gable? The studio has asked her to write another for him. I remember the controversy over "A Free Soul," because in it Norma Shearer, the heroine, was in love with Clarke Gable, the gangster. In the face of what's happening today that would appear very old fashioned. . . . It was Brynie Fay who said, "Gosh! Our 4-Fs are the fightingest men out of uniform." . . . Reason it will take Jon Hall's broken nose so long to heal is that he had plastic surgery performed on it seven or eight years before he did "Hurricane." It's always dangerous to redo a job that's already been done. . . . Greg McClure's name was changed from Dale Easton because Frank Tuttle, who's directing "The Great John L., didn't think Dale sounded like a prize-fighting name.

NORMA SHEARER

This Is It

"Wilson" is a picture we can all be proud of. It took courage to make it. It took courage to put two well trained, but not too well known actors in the leading roles. Alexander Knox was chosen for his voice. I thought while listening to him, "Too bad Wilson hadn't that voice. He could have put over his 14 points." Fans of Marie Dressler, Doug Fairbanks, and Mary Pickford will get a twinge when they see them selling Liberty bonds. There's a scene, too, of General Pershing pinning a decoration on a soldier's chest. That soldier was Douglas MacArthur. The settings of Bill Ihnen are superbly done. And when the Wilsons were shown in Lincoln's room, I turned to Darryl Zanuck and said, "Great heavens! Where did you get Lincoln's bed?" He replied, "Why, we made it, of course." But what he made was screen history.

Is RKO Asleep?

Metro wants a story that RKO doesn't even know it owns. It's "The Second Man," by Sam Behrman. It's good. RKO is looking far and wide for a vehicle for Cary Grant, and here it has one. Wait until Bill Dozier, who has joined that organization, hear about this. He'll grab onto it. . . . When I saw Salvador Dali's painting of Ann Warner, I knew he was destined for a screen offer. Sure enough, it came the night of the unveiling. Dali will do backgrounds, furniture and costumes for dream sequences in "The House of Dr. Edwardes"—all because Alfred Hitchcock found the painting so outstanding. Hitchy, who's 'way ahead of schedule on this one, is trying to finish it before David Selznick returns from drifting down the Delaware. . . . Carl Schroeder, Vic Mature's brain trust, has written a play about the days when he and Vic lived in the same house. It's called "A Cast of Characters." Carl's in New York visiting his wife, Lucia Carroll, and watching her in "A School for Brides." They'd not seen each other in four months.

Stop her before she bites . . . with FLIT! Flit is sudden death to all mosquitoes. Yes! Even the dread Anopheles . . . the mosquito that carries malaria from a sick man to you . . . the mosquito you can tell, because it stands on its head . . . is easy to kill with Flit. Buy an ample supply of Flit, today!

FLIT kills flies, ants, moths, bedbugs and all mosquitoes.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

DON'T BE SURPRISED if there is a blow-up brewing in Japan not unlike that which nearly bumped off Mr. Hitler recently. This columnist has reason to believe that things are seething inside Japan right now and that the die is cast against the Fascist military clique at the top.

This young military clique represents something similar to the Nazis and Fascists of Germany and Italy—in fact, emulated them. Demanding a tough, cut-throat policy against China and the rest of the world, they came into power through assassination, will go out the same way—or through hara-kiri.

It was groups of young Fascist officers who shot Tokyo's leading moderates, back in the days when it was not yet definitely decided that Japan should conquer Asia. Now the moderates are able to say "I told you so," and are beginning to get the upper hand.

The Emperor probably will not be a victim of the revolutionary turmoil for two reasons: (1) He is a moderate himself, never did go as far as the cut-throat young Fascists, was kept more or less a palace prisoner by them; (2) he is better guarded than any other man in the world. High walls, moats, trained, trusted bodyguards surround him. Not even his personal tailor is permitted to touch him.

Unrest inside Japan has not had time to be communicated to Jap troops at the front, nor is it likely to affect outside war areas much. The Jap soldier away from home can be counted on to fight to the very end, because he cannot come home unless he is victorious. The code of Bushido does not permit it.

The big thing to watch, when and if things inside Japan reach the boiling point, is the Jap fleet. Its officers will be faced with the alternative, under the code, of all committing suicide or sailing into the enemy, no matter what the odds against them, and fighting it out.

Chances are it will be the latter alternative.

Postwar Women

THE OFFICIAL record doesn't show it, but South Dakota's Republican Senator Chan Gurney made a memorable speech extolling women's part in the war during a meeting last week of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The committee was in secret session to consider the Kilgore bill on postwar economy, and Chan was actually aiming at getting women out of industry after the war, but he opened up with this bit of chivalry:

"American women," he said, have done themselves proud in this war period. They have left their homes, at great sacrifice, to work in the war plants and on the farms, to be sure the men who are doing the fighting get the weapons and the food they need. They have gone into the armed forces to speed victory. The willingness and cheerful spirit of American women will be one of the brightest pages in our war history."

Then, suddenly, the South Dakota Senator paused and came to the real point he was aiming at.

"These women," he said, "must go back to the home and the farm. The unemployment benefits called for in this bil would cause many women to try to remain in industry, and that is one of the evils of the bill."

Gurney's idea about women is causing real concern among many legislators. They fear that postwar industry will not have enough jobs for all male applicants, even without the competition of thousands of women who were never self-supporting before the war.

Woodrow Wilson History

ERUDITE ERNEST CUNEO called the turn on three errors in Darryl Zanuck's "Wilson." After the film opened in New York Cuneo told Zanuck:

"You have Secretary of War Baker telling Wilson, 'I regret to say that 112,000 men have been killed.' Actually," reminded Cuneo, "there were only 50,000 American men killed in World War I.

"You also have Wilson receiving word that he has just carried 22 counties in New Jersey. That is a real triumph, because there are only 21 counties in New Jersey.

"Finally," quoth Cuneo, "you have Senator Glass seeing Woodrow Wilson in 1913. In that year Glass was only a Representative."

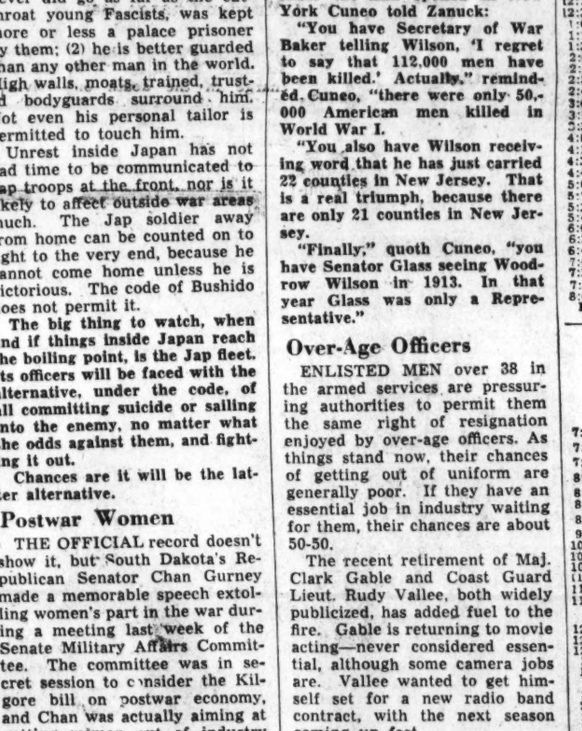
Over-Age Officers

ENLISTED MEN over 38 in the armed services are pressuring authorities to permit them the same right of resignation enjoyed by over-age officers. As things stand now, their chances of getting out of uniform are generally poor. If they have an essential job in industry waiting for them, their chances are about 50-50.

The recent retirement of Maj. Clark Gable and Coast Guard Lieut. Rudy Vallee, both widely publicized, has added fuel to the fire. Gable is returning to movie acting—never considered essential, although some camera jobs are. Vallee wanted to get himself set for a new radio band contract, with the next season coming up fast.

The Army explains that Gable has completed his assignment and that there is no other similar work to be done. "If he were a sergeant and could turn a camera," said an Army spokesman, "we wouldn't let him go. We need cameramen. But he's a major and is not permitted to turn a camera."

Life's Darkest Moment



The Ubiquitous Movie; Notes of the Theater

By Marjory Kelly

(In the absence of Nelson B. Bell on vacation.)

That most typical and universal of American relaxations, the motion picture, is following American boys all over the world, not only into our own remote outposts and front lines, but across the lines into enemy camps.

The gifts of United States movie-makers, 16-mm. films are being shown the millions of Allied war prisoners in occupied Europe. Neutral YMCA workers, traveling from Geneva through Germany to Stockholm, provide the films and pojection equipment which furnish diversion and reminders of home to men who sorely need them.

Newsreels and war films, of course, are not allowed, either by U. S. Postal censors or by enemy regulations. Considering the usual reaction of fighting men to Hollywood representations of the war the war film prohibition is probably just as well. Men who've seen the worst of it and been forced to surrender would hardly regret being forced to miss the spectacle of celluloid heroes foiling the Nazi armies practically single-handed.

The films they see, therefore, are escapist—such productions as "Lady of Burlesque," "Cover Girl," "Knickerbocker Holiday," "Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "The Uninvited."

The distributoin of these is a fine thing, and returned prisoners will no doubt have grateful words to say about the cheerful hours and lightened spirits such films provided.

It would be pleasant if there were more of a contrast on this side of the battle lines in the matter of political censorship. It's rather ironic for a film like "Wilson," which naturally couldn't be shown to Yanks in prison camps, to be also barred from Yank army theaters at home lest GIs be subjected to its political implications and influenced in their vote. The Nazis must find it pretty amusing.

Local Performer in France

The Community War Fund office reports that John Walter Barnes of 4448 Ord st. ne., known as "Johnny" in his tap-dancing days at the Earle and Capitol Theaters, is among the 50 entertainers now performing under USO-Camp Shows auspices in France.

"Johnny's" previous USO appearances have been in Australia and New Guinea.

Actors are wanted to complete the cast of a benefit show for the Disabled American Veterans, according to a phone call from Fraser Gardner of the DAV office. The play is a comedy, "American Cartoon," and the cast members so far recruited have come from American University, the YMCA and WPB.

Interested thespians are requested to call Mr. Fraser at DI 1447 or drop in at his office, 528 Munsey Building. The group is rehearsing tonight and are ready, willing and eager to audition any suitable mades at that time or later.

Backstage people, too, will be needed, so people who like laboring with lights, paint buckets or hammer and saw will be welcomed.

Meanwhile, volunteers are still greatly needed for a more serious project—Glendale Hospital has only about 500 of the 2000 volunteers to serve as nurses' assistants so desperately important to the hospital's continuance.

Both white and Negro volunteers are asked, and both men and women. They have their choice of serving on day or night shifts, and will be furnished adequate transportation without charge from convenient pickup points. They don't need experience, either; skilled nurses will instruct them, and the training may be very useful in time to come.

It's hardly a glamorous or flashy way of serving the war effort, but anyone anxious to do an important job could hardly find one that more urgently needs doing.

Cigarette Shake-up

Mexico City (U.P.).—A decree by President Manuel Avila Camacho has declared the Mexican cigarette industry saturated and provides means to spread manufacture more evenly among the big and small companies.

LEONARD LYONS

Looseleaf Notebook

New York, Aug. 14.

TRAVEL DEPT.: During his recent trip to China, Vice President Wallace went to Kunming. He met with some Chinese war lords who had invited him to make an inspection tour of the interior. At the starting point some sedan chairs were waiting for the war lords and their distinguished guest. . . . Wallace frowned at the thought of being carried, in a sedan chair, by Chinese laborers. He made his decision quickly. "I have two strong legs," said the spokesman for the Century of the Common Man, "and will not be carried by any human."

HENRY A. WALLACE

BOOK DEPT.: Gen. Moishe "Ma" Cohen, the soldier of fortune who was a sergeant-major in the Irish army, fought in the Canadian army and spent the past few years as a general in the Chinese army, was in Lindy's the other night. General Cohen was asked whether he's writing a book about his amazing military adventures. "No, I'm not writing a book," he said. "I'm too young yet." . . . The general then discussed successful authors who have written best-selling books about China after a three-week visit. "The remarkable thing about China," he said, "is that in the first three weeks you know everything about the country. But after that, the longer you stay the less you know."

SCHOOL DEPT.: The shows in which large casts are employed now provide actors with extra-curricular training. The Theater Guild hired a drama coach for the chorus girls and ballet dancers in "Oklahoma" . . . Some of the actors in "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," headed by Louis Calhern, rehearse after hours in plays which then are performed in the veterans' hospitals here . . . And Michael Todd, who has two large-cast shows in "Mexican Hayride" and "Catherine Was Great," is financing his casts' cooperative repertory shows to be performed after midnight at Labor Stage.

SOCIAL NOTE: Thomas Mitchell, the film star now visiting N. Y., tells of the time when his grandchild was born, and John Barrymore arrived to inspect the baby. This was a few days before Barrymore's collapse. He was accompanied by John Decker, the artist, who dresses, talks and looks like Barrymore . . . As Barrymore staggered toward the baby, he noticed that Decker still was beside him. "Wait a minute," Barrymore told Decker. "Don't let it see the both of us at the same time."

LOCAL NEWS: The N. Y. Times' front page, in reporting that Willkie had received a note from the President inviting him to the White House after the President's return, said: "The existence of such a note had been rumored for a week or more." The existence of this note was announced here in the column of July 24 . . . The Hurricane, one of Broadway's largest night clubs, was sold and will become a Chinese restaurant . . . Bing Crosby, who was reported to be in the South Pacific, was in El Morocco last week . . . The Duke of Windsor, who once set the fashion rules, now wears gray flannels to the night clubs . . . From London comes the report that Charlie Chaplin has expressed a desire to make a tour for ENSA, Britain's troop-entertaining unit.

MUSIC DEPT.: In 1937 the $1000 violin award of the National Federation of Women's Clubs was won by Eudice Shapiro, who played a Derenberg Stradivarius borrowed from the Joseph Haft Collection . . . Miss Shapiro will be this week's soloist with the NBC Symphony. She'll play the same Stradivarius she once had borrowed. With the $1000 prize as a start, she was able to save enough to buy the violin.

Art Department: In "The Stork Run," the collection of cartoons about babies, Gregory d'Alessio's contribution is captioned: "Doesn't it baffle you, Gurney? Of the millions of married couples in the world, Heaven chose US, a humble couple in Chappaqua, N. Y., to have the most beautiful child in the world.'" The parents in this cartoon bear a striking resemblance to the cartoon editor of Collier's, Gurney Williams, and his wife, who live with their baby in Chappaqua, N.Y.

Movies: Lewis Milestone has a friend, one of Hungary's best known movie camermen, who often was visited by his sister, who lives in America. Each time she told him she needed money. Each time he gave her large sums. . . . He was in Poland when the Nazis came. After a long, roundabout journey, he finally arrived here. His sister met him and took him to a bank, where he signed some papers. "This is your bank account," his sister told him. Then she took him on a tour of the midtown section and pointed to a number of buildings, office and residential, all rented. "These are your properties," she told her brother. "I invested all the money you gave me. The deeds are in your name."

BUSINESS DEPT.: Capt. Geoffrey Eden, who is Lord Aukland, cousin of Anthony Eden, is the house governor of the Royal Hospital and the president of the Royal Society of Magicians. Because of the war, both jobs now are somewhat related. As house governor, Captain Eden tours the hospital wards, and as head of the magicians' organization he entertains the wounded soldiers . . . In one ward a patient criticized the manner in which Captain Eden was doing a trick, and showed him the proper way of doing it. "Who taught you how to do it?" Captain Eden asked . . . "Nobody taught me. I invented this trick," replied the patient, who before the war was Britain's noted magician, The Great Carlton.

Plane Sergt. Hewitt Intended to Board Crashed, Killing 21

Had Master Sergt. Richard Hewitt, USA, 23, held his present rank when he went overseas 29 months ago he would not be at his home, 9421 Colesville, rd., Silver Spring, Md., today.

Just back from duty on the adjutant general's staff in Egypt, Sergt. Hewitt yesterday recalled how one of the two planes which took his staff to an undisclosed post crashed with all of its 21 passengers killed. Then a corporal, he was about to board the first plane but was told it was only for officers. He boarded the second. When it arrived at its destination in the Middle East he and his fellow companions were handed black arm bands. The loss of the men who parted with him in the other plane was then revealed.

The son of Mrs. Frank L. Hewitt and the late Captain Hewitt the lifelong resident of Silver Spring is on a 21-day furlough. Twenty pounds lighter than when he went overseas, Serbeant Hewitt attributes his loss of weight to a month's hospitalization / due to sinus and teeth extractions.

It was a triple celebration at the Hewitt home Sunday night. First Sergeant Hewitt had a reunion with his brother, Pfc. Thomas Robert Hewitt, stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., also home on furlough. Secondly the occasion marked the celebration of Sergeant Hewitt's 23d birthday on July 21. The family, knowing he was due home soon, saved his presents, which he opened Sunday. Lastly his homecoming was jointly celebrated with the christening of his five-week-old nephew, James Wesley Hewitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hewitt, also of Silver Spring, at St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen.

Known as (Dick) to his friends Sergeant Hewitt was with the Maryland National Guard when called to active service with his other brothers, First Lieut. Jack Hewitt, serving in Frane.c and Staff Sergt. William Hewitt, stationed in England.

OPA Post Vacant

Charles M. Irelan, chairman of the War Price and Rationing Board at Silver Spring, yesterday recommended appointment of Martin F. Iverson, Takoma Park, as chief clerk of the board, to the Maryland OPA, due to the resignation of Lauman T. Faulconer, effective September 1.

Iverson, building inspector for the eastern area of Montgomery County, is serving on the board as a member of the gasoline and trie panel. He has been a volunteer on the board since it began. Well known in the community, Iverson is also commander of Takoma Park Post, American Legion.

Faulconer, who has held the post for two years, is quitting to enter a private business.

Blood Donors Needed

Outbreaks of poison ivy and hay fever were given yesterday as the reason why the Bethesda Branch of the Montgomery County Chapter has fallen short of its blood donor quota by Mrs. Linton H. Smith, chairman of the blood donor unit for the branch.

Because of last-minute cancellations Mrs. Smith yesterday issued a plea for additional donors when the unit operates at Christ Lutheran Church, Georgetown rd., Thursday from 9 a. m. until 1:30 p. m. Appointments may be made by calling Oliver 5477, Oliver 0708 or Wisconsin 2528.

Playground Teams Plan Meet Today

Six Alexandria playground teams will compete in a citywide track and field meet at the Jefferson School grounds, West and Cameron sts., this morning, sponsored by the Alexandria Recreation Department, under Alan L. Heil. Team champions selected in preliminaries will vie for honors, with the winning playground team to receive an award as city champion and the individual winners of each event to receive awards as city champions in their classes.

A Negro contest is scheduled at 6:30 p. m. at the Parker-Gray High School grounds, Wythe and Alfred sts., when the Lyles-Crouch and Parker-Gray playground teams hold a track and field meet to determine citywide stars.

The five classes of competitors for the two meets are: Senior, junior and midget boys, and junior and senior girls. Events have been scheduled as follows:

Sixty-yard dash for junior and senior boys, 50-yard dash for midget boys and junior and senior girls, 240-yard relay for junior and senior boys, 200-yard relay for midget boys and junior and senior girls, running high jump for midget, junior and senior boys, and the standing broad jump, basketball throw for distance, the hop, step and jump, and the obstacle race for midget, junior and senior boys and junior and senior girls.

Manslaughter Term of Youth Is Suspended

Earl J. Garrett, jr., 16-year-old Alexandria youth who pleaded guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the death of Perry Quick, 41-year-old Alexandria mechanic, employed at the Navy Yard, who died following a fist fight with Garrett, May 28, yesterday was given a 5-year suspended penitentiary sentence and placed on good behavior for five years.

Judge William P. Woolls in Alexandria Corporation Court acted on the recommendation of Paul Kieve, northern Virginia probation officer.

The boy, his father, his attorney, James N. Colasanto, and the probation officer, said they planned to enlist the youth in the United States Merchant Marine recruiting office in Washington.

Contract Let For Additions To 3 Schools

The contract for construction of additions to the elementary public school buildings at North Four Corners, Montgomery Hills, and Rockville has been awarded to L. J. Keller & Son of Jefferson, Md., subject to approval of the FWA, it was announced yesterday at the office of the Montgomery County Board of Education at Rockville.

It was explained that approval by the Federal agency is necessary because one-half of the funds will be provided under the Lanham Act. The Montgomery County Commissioners will furnish the other half.

The proposals were opened at 4 p. m. Friday and were promptly acted on by the committee of County Educational Board of members named for the purpose. The committee consisted of Julius P. Stadler, Arthur B. Joseph and E. K. Metzger. The bid of the Keller firm was the lowest of five submitted.

It was stated that building operations are expected to start in the near future and be completed early in the new school year.

Stettinius Gets Plea for World Bill of Rights

Incorporation of an International Bill of Rights in any postwar security system the forthcoming Four Power parley at Dumbarton Oaks may conceive was urged yesterday by the American Jewish Conference in a memorandum submitted to Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr.

Called a "test of good faith," the bill is designed to protect individual rights in every country through "the establishment of appropriate and adequate national and international machinery to secure the enforcement of these rights."

The statement pointed to "the total disregard of civilized concepts of individual human rights on the part of some states" and asserts that "herein lie the roots of the international anarchy that contributed to the assault of the Axis powers on the civilized world."

Among the planks submitted for consideration by the four powers and all other United Nations are:

1. Full and complete protection of life, liberty, freedom of worship, and civil rights for the inhabitants of all countries without distinction of birth, nationality, language, race or religion.

2. The inalienable right of all religious, ethnic and cultural groups to maintain and foster their respective group identities on the basis of equality.

The conference consists of delegates from 63 Jewish organizations. The committee which submitted the memorandum to Stettinius included Hayim Greenberg, cochairman of the postwar commission of the conference, Rabbi Joshua Trachtenberg, Miss Jane Evans and Dr. A. S. Kohnasky, commission secretary.

'Doll Woman' Given 10 Years, $10,000 Fine

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Branded as "a woman who sold her country to the Japs for money," frail, thrice-married Mrs. Valee Dickinson, 50-year-old doll store owner, was sentenced today in Federal Court to 10-years' imprisonment and fined $10,000 on her guilty plea to a charge of violating the Federal censorshiplaw.

Mrs. Dickinson, who earlier had delivered an impassioned plea for clemency, was in tears as she heard Judge Schackelford Miller, jr., impose the sentence—the maximum penalty.

In her plea, she admitted associating with Japanese agents in the country, but placed the blame of sending information about West Coast naval activities to the enemy upon her late husband, Lee T. Dickinson, former San Francisco produce merchant.

U. S. Attorney James B. M. McNally, who called the defendant "a hired Japanese spy," said the Government charged her with being the agent through whom the Japanese were to be supplied naval information. He said the plot was the scheme of a former enemy minister and that the information was sent to a third person in Argentina but was destined for Tokyo.

The Government earlier had called for a dismissel of an espionage charge because, McNally said, the evidence was circumstantial in nature and could not be brought out in open court without endangering the national security.

Silver Spring Man Charged With Arson

Gordon Baurbour, 38, Clifton Park, Silver Spring, yesterday was arrested and charged with arson and burning the home of Beal Zeek on whose property Baurbour occupies a trailer.

Zeek narrowly escaped injury and death early Saturday when his two-story frame house was burned to the ground. Awakened from his sleep Zeek, wearing no clothes, jumped from his bedroom window to safety.

Upon investigatino with Richard B. Spencer, special agent of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, Detective Lieut. Frank A. Lane of the Montgomery County Detective Bureau, said Zeek told him that Baurbour threatened him after an argument ensued over the latter occupying Zeek's house. Baubour told Zeek, owner of the property, if "he couldn't live there no one else would," according to Lane. Evidence of gasoline was found about the fire ruins.

Baurbour is being held on a $2000 bond until a hearing is set ta a late date.

6 New Polio Cases Reported As Child Dies

An 11-year-old District girl died of infantile paralysis at Children's Hospital yesterday as six new cases of the disease were discovered here.

The fatality, marking the fifth in the District since July 1, was Charlotte Bly, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Bly, live at 908 Kennedy st. nw. Admitted to Children's Hospital last Saturday, she was found to be suffering from a serious "bulbar" type of poliomelitis which affects the throat and chest muscles, hospital officials said.

Three 7-year-old boys, diagnosed as infantile paralysis victims yesterday at Children's were Harry Kelly of Leesburg, Va.; David Mead Field, jr., of 3350 C st. se., and Rodney Cox, jr., of 2011 Lanier dr., Silver Spring, Md. All were reported in fair condition.

New cases discovered yesterday at Gallinger Hospital include Jean Andrew, 11, Negro, of 2232 Anzier pl. se.; Phillip Mozie, 10, Negro, of Gainsville, Va., and Mrs. Patricia Stedman, 32, of 1512 23rd st. se. Although suffering from the bulbar type of the disease, Mrs. Stedman was said to be in good condition.

The six victims, believed the highest number reported in any one day here since the outbreak of the disease on July 1, brought to 65 the total number of cases treated in the District. Although only eight infantile paralysis patients are being treated at Gallinger at the present time, Children's Hospital reported that it is treating 35 persons, and that with the addition of another three victims, provision must be made to open another ward.

Meanwhile, Eugene Day, 9, East Falls Church (Va.) child who was admitted to Children's last weekend with the disease, was reported to be in fair condition yesterday.

Arundel Has Four More Polio Cases

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Four additonal cases of polio or infantile paralysis were announced today by Anne Arundel County health department officials, bringing to 12 the number reported in the county since the first outbreak on July 17.

No deaths have occurred as yet in the county from the disease, the department stated. The new cases were those of a 10-year-old boy in Annapolis, a 2½-year-old boy in Eastport, an 8-year-old girl in Brooklyn and a 13-year-old girl living near the Defense highway.

Murder Charge Issued

Fred Coleman, 30, of 236 N. Henry st., Alexandria, was sought yesterday by police on a murder charge in the death of Melvin Skelton, 42, Negro, of 205 Northwest st., who was fatally stabbed Sunday night.

Civic Leaders Unable to Agree On Formal Victory Day Plans

Out of more than 40 business and civic leaders who met with the Commissioners yesterday to plan a Victory Dey celebration, no more than two persons managed to agree on what should be the procedure for the anticipated mass merry-making which will follow news of Germany's surrender.

There were some in the gathering yesterday, such as Harry Wender, Federation of Citizens' Associations' president, who even went so far as to express doubt that finish of one half of the war should be cause for a general public blow-off.

Wender, while admitting that there is little hope of subduing an emotional explosion on Germany's day o fdefeat, mentioned the possible mistake in the Nation's Capital setting a two-day holiday precedent with the United States still at war with Japan.

Commissioner John Russell Young, who called the meeting, and Engineer Commissioner Csarles W. Kutz, heard all the various plans and suggestions presented, and wound up the afternoon without a concrete program.

Some Ideas Are Clear

After more than an hour's discussion, several prevailing opinions among businessmen here were clear:

1. Department stores plan to close half a day if the news comes before noon; if after noon, they will shut up shop th eremainder of that day and the following business day. Instructions, according to the department store representative, A. D. Vick, have already been issued to employes.

(2) Liquor dealers don't want to close because of the monster Mardi Gras. The idea was tentatively advanced that perhaps the District should close restaurants which sell liquor and retail stores Milton S. Kronheim, local wholesaler, vigorously denied the worth in such a scheme and pointed out that, in 1918, Washington was dry. Commissioner Young had commented on the property damage at that time. Kronheim denied that legal liquor sales had contributed to it and asked for an opinion from Police Inspector Harvey Callahan, who said he would be "inclined to favor the idea of leaving liquor dispensaries open."

(3) Hotels would find it impossible to close, according to L. Gardner Moore, president of the hotel association here, but they would follow the ruling of the Commissioners if it were decided to lock doors of their restaurants and cocktail lounges.

4. Restaurants feel it their "civic duty" to remain open for business, with about 70 per cent of Washington's population eating out every night, anyway, according to Robert Wilson, secretary of the restaurant association.

5. Motion picture theaters, since they oculd "take about 60,000 people off the streets" and thereby aid in relieving congestion, also feel civic-minded about remaining open.

6. Robert M. Buck, representing the Washington Daily News, concluded the afternoon's session with the flat statement that "any attempt to plan a spontaneous celebration" was a complete waste of time, and added that nothing had been said which might not have been expectde as normal reactions from the interests involved.

At the conclusion of all debate, Commissioner Young agreed with Buck, that any celebration would be beyond the realm of planning in advance.

"However, we want to do everything possible to protect life and property during any festivities," Young said.

Three Drowned In Tidewater Area

By the Associated Press

Three men were drowned in the tidewater area of Virginia Sunday while seeking relief from the August heat, reports yesterday showed.

Lee Bennett, who formerly lived at Newport News before moving to North Carolina, drowned while bathing in the Piankatank River near Harcum, Gloucester County.

I. B. Sherade, machinist's mate, first class, USN, said to be a native of Mississippi, drowned while swimming near the public diving stand at Buckroe Beach.

William Pearce Curley, 43, a Norfolk Navy Yard employe, drowned Sunday near Chesapeake Beach.

Trees as Memorials Urged by Forester

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Maryland Forester Joseph F. Kaylor suggested today the planting of trees along highways as living war memorials in place of "another plague of statuary and monumentst."

Kaylor said the trees, marked perhaps by a plaque, offered great opportunities for improvement of some present roadways and in beautifying postwar superhighways.

"What better tribute could there be to the heroism of a Colin Kelly than a tree-lined parkway?" Kaylor asked in urging support of civic organizations and women's clubs.

Senate Leadership

Senator Hatch's charge that the Senate is under Republican control, if it was intended to be a charge, seems to us to merit close examination. In the defeat of the fantastic Kilgore bill and approval of the inadequate George bill on postwar unemployment compensation the minority party certainly had its way. And this is only one of many instances in which the controlling votes have been cast by Republicans and conservative Southern Democrats. When an issue arises on which these groups can agree, they are certain to carry the Senate with them.

That fact gives the minority frequent opportunities to make its influence felt. If it uses those opportunities merely to play politics or to vote unsound policies into effect, it is subject to severe criticism. But the major responsibility, it seems to us, falls upon the majority party to take the lead in shaping postwar legislation that will command majority support. When the GOP sees a breach in the ranks of its political opponents, even one of General Bradley's mechanized divisions might have difficulty in preventing GOP Senators from exploiting that advantage.

Both the unemployment compensation bills before the Senate last week were authored by Democrats. That obviously meant from the beginning a division in the ranks of the majority. That majority cannot hope to retain its control over legislation when it divides into two camps. What it does is to give the minority a chance to speak for the Senate by joining with the camp whose bill it prefers. We suspect, therefore, that Senator Hatch was taking a left-handed swing at the congressional leadership within his own party. The weakness of that leadership has long been apparent. Now it is so negative as to pass the controlling voice over to the minority.

In some measure, too, this predicament of the majority in the Senate reflects the struggle through which the Democratic Party as a whole is going. The CIO has attached itself to the party as an energetic left wing. That wing almost never beats in harmony with the more conservative element in the party which has its stronghold in the Southern States. If these two wings are to be at constant war within the party, it must expect the repeated embarrassment of having the Republicans choose between them.

The test of the majority in the Senate came in the drafting of postwar legislation. With strong leadership and a reasonably cohesive membership, the majority would have been able to frame a compromise bill at the beginning and to have secured its approval. In the absence of such leadership and cohesiveness a grave question arises as to whether the majority in the Senate can sponsor and enact any comprehensive program. We think that situation should be realistically faced and that every effort should be made to keep factions from grabbing the ball and running with it, particularly while vital postwar legislation is being enacted.

The Gracious Touch

We are obliged to Mr. James Paul Stoakes of Huntington, W. Va., for letting us know, through the medium of a letter to the Scientific Monthly, about Don Guilermo Bonitto. Don Guilermo, it seems, is the author of the daily weather bulletins which appear in the Colombian newspaper Tiempo. He is distinguished from his American colleagues by a graceful and engaging literary style. Here, for example, is his manner of predicting rain:

According to careful studies, the three days of splendid sunshine now enjoyed in Bogota will be succeeded by our customary weather within another day.

Perhaps it is just as well for all concerned that Don Guilermo is not the official forecaster for, say, Los Angeles, but for our part we find this urbane candor rather charming. We especially admire Don Guilermo's delicate admission of his own fallibility, as when, after predicting an interval of fair weather to be followed by showers, he goes on to observe that:

The laws of physics and mathematics, so wisely combined by the Supreme Divinity, stand in contradiction to the limited knowledge which human science has been able to acquire concerning them.

The especial charm of that observation, piety aside, is that at almost any time showers are a reasonably safe prediction in Bogota.

And Don Guilermo, it seems, is always willing to argue points of meteorology politely with his numerous correspondents and also to apologize to them publicly when his forecasts prove to have been wrong, as he confesses is frequently the case. Altogether Don Guilermo strikes us as the perfect weatherman, and if we had him, or someone like him, to do our forecasting in Washington, it would make even this climate almost tolerable.

Order Of The Day

The eloquent order of the day which General Eisenhower issued to the troops under his command yesterday is part plea, part promise. The plea is that every member of the Allied forces in the European theater do his absolute utmost at this climactic moment. Every airman is urged to make it his direct responsibility to blast the enemy unceasingly by day and by night so that the latter will be "denied safety either in fight or in flight." Every sailor is urged to make sure that the way is barred to reinforcement or escape of the enemy by sea. And every soldier is being requested to "go forward to his assigned objective with the determination that the enemy can survive only through surrender." The aim is to hold every foot of ground that is captured and not let a single German escape through a line once established.

These pleas to the Allied fighting forces are the result of no ordinary set of circumstances. They reflect a situation that is full of promise for our side and bears within it the possibility of a major catastrophe for the Nazis. With the Germans in headlong retreat from the Caen sector to which they clung to so desperately over a period of many weeks and with their escape route threatened by encirclement, the Allies have been presented with a great—if fleeting—opportunity to try a knockout blow against the Nazis forces in France. That is what General Eisenhower must have meant when he spoke of the opportunity for "a major Allied victory, one whose realization will mean notable progress toward the final downfall of our enemy." This week, he added, can be made "a momentous one in the history of this war—a brilliant and fruitful week for us, a fateful one for the ambitions of Nazi tyrants."

It is evident that tremendous developments are in prospect. There can be no doubt that every man jack in the Allied armies will respond with courage and enthusiasm to General Eisenhower's plea. They know that their lives will not be endangered or their strength taxed needlessly. We expect the faith they have heretofore manifested in their supreme commander to be demonstrated, in an offensive that will surpass even the miracles that have been wrought since these troops broke through the German lines and began their swift envelopment of northwestern France.

On the home front, too, General Eisenhower's words will bring fresh enthusiasm and a renewed confidence that the time for a knockout is here. We are justified in viewing the whole war in Europe as the general views this momentous operation south and west of the Seine. It is a time for zeal, determination, fortitude and superhuman effort until the victory is clinched.

Mediterranean Jitters

The presence of Winston Churchill and high-ranking American military and civilian officials in Rome, the heavy and continuous bombing of German military and naval installations along the French Riviera and the Rhone Valley and the fact that large Allied convoys are streaming through the Strait of Gibralter into the Mediterranean have all convinced the Germans that something is brewing in the Middle Sea.

Something probably is brewing. But the Germans appear to be in doubt as to just where the blow will fall. After all, the Allies are not limited in their choice. They possess sufficient power to invade France from the south, which is one of the things the Germans expect them to do. But the Allies are also in a position, in conjunction with Turkey who recently broke off diplomatic and commercial relations with the Reich, to make a concerted attack on the German-held islands in the Aegean. And Churchill's meeting with Marshal Tito, the Yugoslav leader, in Rome also suggests the possibility of an Allied thrust into the Balkans by way of the Adriatic. In any event, the flare-up of activity in the Mediterranean area is adding to the state of jitters which for so long has existed in the Reich.

About Experts

In a letter addressed to Senator Byrd, chairman of the Committee on Nonessential Expenditures, Senator Wherry has called attention to the numerous so-called experts who appear on the floor of the Senate chamber when important debates are in progress. He wants the Byrd Committee to find out who they are, whence they come, and whom they represent. A special investigation should not be necessary to rid the Senate of undesirable hangers-on and lobbyists, if they are, indeed, a nuisance. The hullabaloo raised because Dr. Schimmel, a WPB employe loaned to the Kilgore subcommittee, addressed a whispered question to the presiding officer of the Senate apparently precipitated the demand for a general inquiry, although it developed that Dr. Schimmel's question was quite routine. Moreover, his presence on the floor during the debate on demobilization legislation was certainly understandable. In raising a justified point of order against his action in addressing the chair, the Republicans were really shooting at him for ulterior reasons. They wished to call attention to his alleged close contacts with the CIO and thereby to suggest that the Kilgore bill was inspired by the CIO.

However, attempts to discredit individual experts selected by the Senators to assist them can have no effect except to discredit the Senators themselves since they alone are responsible for the selection of aides. There rather is need for an investigation of the methods followed by committees in picking their expert assistants. In his letter Senator Wherry notes the fact that Dr. Schimmel is employed by the WPB at a salary of $8000. If that agency can "lend" this expert to a congressional committee, without being handicapped thereby, the salary paid him should be regarded as a nonessential expenditure, as Senator Wherry implies. If he is needed, then the Senate is impairing the efficiency of an executive agency by borrowing him. Raids on the personnel of executive agencies should not under any circumstances be tolerated. If an expert can render more useful service to a congressional committee than in some other position in the Government, he should be put on the payroll of Senate or House, as the case may be. And if the customary payments for clerical assistance are not sufficient to warrant a transfer, they should be raised. In short as we have already pointed out, the criticism of the experts attached to congressional committees really resolves itself into a demand for a trained expert personnel paid for out of funds appropriated for the purpose.

Loan Drive Results

During the Fifth War Loan Drive the Treasury raised $20.6 billion—29 per cent in excess of its over-all goal of $16 billion and a larger sum than was obtained in any preceding drive. Total sales to individuals (including partnerships and personal trust accounts) exceeded the quota set for the drive by only 6 per cent, while sales of the series E bonds—the people's bond—topped the quota by only 1 per cent. On the other hand, corporations and institutional investors (excluding commercial banks) bought 43 per cent more than their assigned quotas. Although a larger participation in the drive by individuals would have been welcomed and would certainly have been possible, considering the huge and growing accumulations of funds in the hands of the people, it should be kept in mind that the investments of insurance companies and savings banks represent indirect investments by the people whose savings they hold. Insofar as funds borrowed by the Government are obtained from such sources, the borrowing operation absorbs savings and is noninflationary in character.

However, the fact that commercial banks were not permitted to participate in the Fifth Loan drive directly, barring limited concurrent purchases for investment of their time deposits, does not indicate that the Treasury has emancipated itself from dependence upon the banks. On the contrary, a large part of the increase in the public debt continues to find lodgment in the commercial banks and to constitute an inflationary addition to public purchasing power, despite the exclusive emphasis on nonbanking participation during recent loan drives. Indirect participation by the commercial banks comes about through their purchases of securities already outstanding from nonbanking investors, who can then use the proceeds of such sales to buy new Government issues. During June and July the Federal Reserve Bank of New York estimates that commercial bank holdings of Government securities, including the $765 milions concurrently subscribed to drive issues but excluding Treasury bills, increased by at least six billion dollars. In addition, bank loans on Government securities rose sharply during the drive, and the New York Reserve Bank concludes that "in some cases and some areas" these loans were obtained by borrowers to finance speculative purchases of Government securities—that is purchases on which the borrower expected to "cash in" by selling at a profit the securities pledged as collateral for loans. The effect, of course, of all these commercial bank operations is to reduce very substantially the net investments of nonbanking investors during the fifth loan drive and to provide critics of the Treasury's borrowing program with more ammunition for attack.

In defense, it can be said that while the commercial banking system continues to absorb a much too large proportion of the public debt increase, the net additions to commercial and Federal Reserve Bank holdings of Government securities were not as great in the fiscal year 1944, when it is estimated the banks acquired $23.4 billion of Government securities, as in the preceding fiscal year when they took $30.6 billion of Government securities. Moreover, the proportion of the debt increase accounted for by the commercial banks and the Federal Reserve Banks dropped from 47.5 per cent in the fiscal year 1943 to 36.4 per cent in 1944. The outlook, therefore, seems good or bad, according to the observer's viewpoint. It looks bad if he is disposed to stress the continuance of a type of borrowing that is currently adding many billions to the tremendous backlog of potentially inflationary purchasing power built up by borrowing from commercial banks. It looks much better if he prefers to emphasize the fact that the nonbanking public is taking absolutely and proportionately more of the new Government obligations that have to be sold somehow to finance wartime deficits.

DAY AFTER WORK WEEK

The honeysuckle strains dripped sun
Against the brown wood fence;
A bumblebee
Flies black with no seen wings.
Upon the smallest tree
A sparrow sings,
But I,
With sun on half-closed lids,
Am quite content to lie
Unheard, unseen—
To breathe the crushed, clean smell
Of grasses warm with green.

Washington Calling

Leadership At Home

THE REPUBLICANS will have to look hard to find anything to quarrel with politically in President Roosevelt's radio talk from Bremerton Saturday night.

It was a geography lesson devoid of the magic Roosevelt has put into his radio addresses in the past. He gave it almost as though he were improvising, without any of the smooth cadences which have marked his delivery in other years.

The press associations reported that he deviated from his text to praise the newspapers and radio for keeping the secret of his trip, so he must have been reading from a prepared manuscript. But it had an extemporaneous sound quite unlike the Roosevelt of 1936 and 1940.

Perhaps it was the fatigue of a long voyage, although in the past the President has been restored by a few days on a ship. Perhaps it's his intense preoccupation with the conduct of the war.

ON HIS DESK here he will find several urgent memoranda dealing with the problems of the home front. Within the Administration there is increasing concern over the lack of preparation for the transition between war and peace. It is being realized at last that this lack is directly related to the scramble of workers to get out of war jobs and into something that seems to have a chance of permanence.

The George demobilization-unemployment compensation bill, just passed by the Senate, would do all right if we could be sure there would be only moderate unemployment for a short time. But that's a gamble. It's too big a gamble to take.

If we go through a bad period, with millions jobless, the provisions of the George bill will be pathetically inadequate. Whoever is President will have to start improvising WPA's and PWA's in order to try to check the downward spiral. The unemployed might not be as patient with such improvisation as they were in the '30's.

The alternative to the George bill was the measure sponsored by Senators Murray and Kilgore. It was so loosely drawn that even its backers didn't know what its limits were.

Here is a situation that calls for skilful leadership. The House starts this week on the same problem. The President can't afford to let a second chance go by default. In some respects the task of the Executive here at home is more difficult than that of the Commander-in-Chief directing the war abroad. There are human variables—Congress, for example—to be dealt with tactfully and patiently.

ON THE MILITARY side you give an order; at home you make a request. Roosevelt has been operating in the military sphere nearly three years, with occasional attention devoted to domestic problems. Moving from one sphere to the other is not easy.

This is not to say that politics and statecraft are not part of the task of the Commander-in-Chief. They are. In that role the President must make political decisions on a high level—decisions which military men would not and could not make.

Most of us do not realize the extent to which President Roosevelt has directed the war. In his significant book, "The Time for Decision," Sumner Welles gives us a glimpse:

"To President Roosevelt himself was due both the conception of, and the decision to undertake the invasion of North Africa as far back as the first months of 1942. After weighing the advantages and disadvantages of all the alternative means by which United States assistance could be made most effective toward hastening the defeat of Germany and Italy, he had reached the conclusion that North African operations were those best calculated to insure the desired results."

I suppose when you make decisions on that scale things here at home tend to look small and unimportant. But, as events a year or two from now are likely to prove, they're not small. They are, in fact, profoundly important.

Von Paulus Talks

By Barnet Nover

More Stalingrads For The Reich

THROUGH THE LAVISH employment of the hangman's noose, Adolf Hitler has apparently succeeded in reasserting his authority over the German army and its high command.

There must still be many German officers who think precisely the way Marshal von Witzleben did and the other generals hanged for treason for their alleged complicity in the July 20 plot against Hitler's life. For the time being such dissenters are cowed and silent. "Order" has been restored in the Wehrmacht.

But the Nazis have not silenced and cannot silence the large number of high-ranking German officers whom the fortunes of war (and their own disgust with Hitler's leadership), have placed beyond Hitler's reach. More and more of them are talking, and what they have to say will not contribute to the Fuehrer's peace of mind.

THE LATEST to speak up is none other than Field Marshal Gen. Friedrich von Paulus, commander of the German Sixth Army, which surrendered at Stalingrad a year and a half ago.

Stalingrad was a disaster of such magnitude that the Nazis made no effort either to deny what had happened or to minimize it. Instead they tried to cushion the blow by emphasizing the heroic aspects of the struggle. In the process they built up von Paulus as the very incarnation of soldierly virtues. On the eve of his surrender Paulus was loaded with decorations and given the rank of field marshal.

Yet Paulus knew better than anyone else that Stalingrad was not merely a disaster of catastrophic dimensions but in large measure an unnecessary one.

A large portion of the 330,000 German troops who finally had to surrender at Stalingrad could have escaped by retreating to the west had Hitler permitted them to do so. But Hitler had given a summary order that they must hold their ground and this order was obeyed.

THIS FACT, long suspected, Paulus has now confirmed in a speech he delivered to his fellow captives. And the conclusion he draws from it and from what subsequently happened is that "Germany has completely lost the war," that a continuation of the war only means "senseless bloodshed," and that the time has come to "remove Adolf Hitler and establish a new state leadership which will end the war."

To what extent the words of Paulus will reach the German people and the German army is, of course, not clear. We can take it for granted that the Nazis will first try to deny that Paulus ever said what the Moscow radio quoted him as saying and if that fails will insist that he was made to say it under duress.

This much is certain: The same line of reasoning that persuaded Paulus to talk and that led such German officers as Marshall von Witzleben to act as they did will operate to convince others.

Only by reversing the tide of the war can Hitler restore confidence in his leadership. This he has promised to do. German prisoners taken in Italy say that the German forces in that theater have been assured that within six weeks the German army will go from the defensive to the offensive. In the meantime tremendous faith is being placed in what the Nazis call the "revenge weapons," i. e. the flying bomb and its successors.

SIX WEEKS is a long time as the war is moving today. And long before the six weeks period is up the grim story of Stalingrad may be repeated not once but several times.

One such Stalingrad is in the making in the Baltic area, where the escape route (except by sea) of some 375,000 German troops has been cut off. Another is in the making in France, where a large part of the German Seventh Army faces encirclement. Still another may develop in the Warsaw area.

The Nazis are creatures of habit. In their decline as during their rise they continue to place great reliance on terror. Losing the war on all fronts they believe they can still win it if only they can sufficiently terrorize the people of Britain.

The same habit of thought is reflected in their penchant for holding on to untenable positions long after sound military considerations demand that they retire from them.

For that reason the bitter feelings voiced by Field Marshal von Paulus regarding Hitler's conduct of the war are certain to be echoed by an increasing number of his fellow officers as the war in Europe proceeds to its inevitable end. So it may not be long before there will simply not be enough Nazi hangmen and firing squads to take care of the embittered and rebellious elements in the Wehrmacht.

East Prussia

By Paul Winkler

Spur To Aggression

GERMAN REFUGEE circles, both here and in England, have entered into violent discussion concerning the future of East Prussia, which has even produced a split in the Free German movement of London. Certain of these Free Germans are opposing strongly the plan for detaching East Prussia from Germany though it has been fairly generally accepted that this territory will go to Poland, or be divided between Poland and Russia.

Their motives for holding firmly to East Prussia are worth considering. Economically speaking, this territory has no value whatsoever for Germany. It was always a drain on tthe rest of the country, which had to pay the expense of maintaining this impoverished region, geographically distant, and not even of service to Germany as an outlet to the sea, its natural hinterland being Poland, not Germany.

What reasons can Germans have for desiring to retain East Prussia, then?

First, to maintain the privileges of the Junkers. Second, to preserve sentimental associations.

THE ONLY Germans who would suffer from the loss of East Prussia would be the Junkers, who hold the tremendous and unprofitable estates in this territory. They have maintained these great properties by means of subsidies from the State. The evil influence of Junkerdom on Germany has in the past been paid for by Germany. To advocate the maintenance of East Prussia as a part of Germany is to come very close to advocating the retention of the power of the Junkers, which all observers agree, nevertheless, is at the root of German aggressiveness.

There remains the sentimental reason for desiring to keep East Prussia: simply that it has long been part of Germany and has played a leading role in German history.

But what sort of role has it played? That part of German history which is connected with East Prussia is its most discreditable part, the history of aggression and oppression. It is not German sentiment so much as Prussian sentiment which is bound up with this region. It was in East Prussia in the 13th century that the Teutonic knights began their battles against the Slavs. Prussia and the Prussian spirit arose from these battles, and Prussianism from this beginning spread all over Germany.

Much has been said of the two Germanies: the aggressive, Prussian Germany which the Free Germans promise us is to be eliminated forever, and the "good Germany" of Goethe and Beethoven, which is to supplant it. But the sentimentality which is connected with East Prussia belongs to the aggressive spirit, and those who find it an injustice that East Prussia should be separated from Germany are convicting themselves by this very attitude of being still in the line of Prussianism and aggression, and not capable of being trusted with developing the good German spirit which they claim exists, but which, so far, has shown itself incapable of determining the course of German history.

IT IS the Prussian spirit which must be eradicated if the world is to have peace hereafter from German attacks, and one way to strike at it would seem to be to remove from Germany the natal ground of that spirit, East Prussia. It serves Germany in absolutely no other way than as the animator of the worst elements in German thinking.

The best proof that the proposal to remove East Prussia from German rule is based on a desire to solve the German question, and not on acquisitiveness on the part of other nations, is that no one else really wants it very badly. The Poles are not putting much stress on the East Prussian question, feeling that they should not let it become a case of accepting East Prussia as compensation for giving up the land east of the Curzon Line. The poor agricultural soil of East Prussia, a land devoid of natural resources, does not impress them as an adequate exchange for the fertile, productive soil of the east. This is an understandable attitude, but so is the Russian attitude, which likewise does not look upon the attribution of East Prussia to Poland as an exchange because Russia considers the territories east of the Curzon Line as hers as of right, for which no compensation need be offered.

East Prussia strikes the Poles as even less acceptable as an exchange for the eastern territories because it appears likely that they will not get all of it. If Russia absorbs the Baltic States, as she has let it be understood that she intends to do, she will presumbaly want to take over the eastern part of East Prussia with the port of Koenigsberg as well. This will give one excellent port to Russia instead of Poland, but on the other hand, Poland would undoubtedly retain the former "corridor" (i. e., part of West Prussia) with both Danzig and Gdynia. These two ports could then be operated in cooperation, instead of under the conditions of ruinous competition which prevailed before the war.

News To Italy

The censor has returned to me several letters addressed to friends and acquaintances of mine in Italy (Naples) because they contained clippings from newspapers. As I understand that various radical newspapers published in New York have been received in liberated Italy, and that various newspapers published in liberated Italy have been received in the United States, I ask why cannot conservative American newspapers, or clippings therefrom, be sent to Italy?

We hear a great deal bearing on the policy of the Government in bringing "democracy" to Italy, but it seems to me that the first essence of democracy is to abide by the Bill of Rights which permits all persons not only to express their views but to hear the views of others. How can we bring democracy to Italy if we do not allow the Italian people, in this case our own friends, to hear or read our views on public questions?

Why do we permit radicals like Luigi Antonini of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, or rather of the American Labor Party, to go to Italy and investigate labor conditions there and then not permit conservative papers to circulate in Italy? Why do we permit George Baldanzi of the CIO to go to Italy to do the same thing, and not permit us to express our views to our friends in Italy?

Ex-Servicemen Welcome

A few days ago I read an article in your paper something to the effect that former servicemen do not feel at home in the USO Clubs. I am a junior hostess at the USO Club at the YWCA at 17th and K sts. At several of our hostess meetings we have discussed methods and means of encouraging former servicemen, including the wounded, to come to our club, but so far we don't seem very popular with them. As junior hostess I attend the USO at 17th and K sts. two nights a week and frequently go to the other clubs around the city to pick up new ideas, and I have seen few men in civilian clothes.

As the Saturday night dances are so popular we usually have to refuse admittance to several hundred guests and are required to tell the civilian men that the club is not for them, but we are instructed to look for any man wearing an ex-service pin and make them welcome, but so far we haven't had a chance.

If you can induce former servicemen to come to our club, which is open every night in the week for games, reading, conversation, etc., and on Saturday night for dancing as well as games, you will be doing us a favor.

We have thought it was snobbishness on the part of the former servicemen that they did not come to the clubs, but it may be that many of them think they are only for men in uniform.

Forgetting Marcantonio

I am sure most people feel that the formation of the PAC is one of the most encouraging signs in the current American political scene.

The PAC represents an attempt (a rather belated attempt, to be sure) on the part of the working people of America to exercise their constitutional right to have a voice in the Government of their country through the election to public office of representatives of their choice, who are pledged to serve their interests.

In your editorial of this date you speak loosely of "abuses" on the part of the PAC without going into detail as to what the alleged abuses are.

You ask, "What is the PAC trying to do?" The answer is very simple. The PAC is trying to improve the caliber of the Congress (and no one will deny that it can stand improvement) by ridding that body of crackpots, reactionaries and isolationists—men who have no business to be there, and insuring the election of responsible, statesmenlike men, who stand for the things that are most important to all Americans at this time—a peace that may endure, and decent economic conditions at home after the war.

The PAC is interested not in parties, but in objectives, and that is to its credit.

It is seeking this end simply by informing the voters of the records of candidates, and educating them politically to an awareness of the issues involved. Not only an entirely legitimate activity, one would say, but a most praiseworthy one; and one that bodes well for the future of this country and preservation of its form of government.

The people of this country wanted Henry Wallace for Vice President. The PAC put up the strongest fight that was made for Wallace at Chicago. They did not succeed, it is true, but they did effect a compromise that is more satisfactory to the people of the country than the choice of the bosses would have been.

The PAC has already succeeded in its short career of ridding Congress of men who are enemies of the American people, both as concerns domestic and international issues. It is succeeding in ridding Congress of men who are a threat to a sane international order after the war, and for that not only the people of America but the people of the world are immeasurably in its debt.

PAC

Your editorial on "CIO and PAC," the third of a series on the subject, asks, "What is the CIO aiming at?" The answer is obvious. As citizens, with a stake in the coming election, the CIO's members are profoundly affected by the decisions of Congress and the administration of social legislation. Their aim is the election of a President and a Congress who will insure adequate inflation control now, and security in the postwar period.

Labor organizations cannot confine their attention to isolated negotiations with individual companies when decisions affecting the economic lives of their members are made on a national scale through such organs as WLB, OPA, NLRB and Congress.

In its emphasis on membership participation at the polls, the PAC is performing a civic function; it asks its members as citizens to buck the inertia characteristic of democratic processes, to register, and to vote. It indorses candidates (as your editorial concedes) of varied viewpoint on the basis of their records as legislators and their promise as active supporters of liberal policies.

Your editorial states that the PAC has been "squandering funds collected from workmen to finance collective bargaining machinery." Original funds for the PAC were assigned to it by vote of elected committees of several unions. These funds have been used only to urge registration, to get out the vote. Funds collected for support of candidates are solicited as voluntary contributions from individual CIO members and others.

FSA Experiment

By Merlo Pusey

Cooley Report Tells Sorry Tale

UNDER ITS PRESENT management, the Farm Security Administration appears to be making a real effort to get back on the beam of congressional policy. About two-thirds of the farm units in its resettlement projects have now been sold to individual farmers. If the present rate of sales is continued for another two years, these ill-fated experiments in communal living should be close to complete liquidation.

PUSEY

Congress had to work itself into a lather, however, before it could make any impression on the FSA. Back in 1937 it passed the Bankhead-Jones Act, one purpose of which was to reverse the Rexford Tugwell policy of herding farmers into Federal colonies. That act was designed to encourage individual farm-home ownership. By implication it called for liquidation of the resettlement projects which contemplated that many farmers would always be tenants of the Government. But the liquidation was long delayed and the FSA went ahead setting up new projects of the Tugwellian type under different names.

THIS PROGRAM ran into trouble from several sources. About two years ago the Comptroller General caught on to the tricks by which the FSA was using its employes to organize nonstock, nonprofit corporations and then lending those corporations rehabilitation funds for the purchase of land. FSA had no authority to purchase land directly for resettlement projects. It tried to beat the law by the clever scheme of setting up corporations to do what the FSA itself could not do. But the Comptroller General was brutal enough to point out that the FSA had no more authority to set up such corporations than it had to make direct purchases of land.

When the Cooley committee began to probe into this aspect of the FSA program, it was even more disturbed than the Comptroller General had been. It appears to have made a thorough and impartial investigation. Some of its conclusions are nothing less than shocking. Instead of promptly liquidating the old resettlement projects, the recent Cooley report says, the FSA "created and financed additional projects in exactly the same manner but by different names, such as relocation projects, land-purchasing associations, land-leasing associations, land-development projects, and cooperative-farm projects, all of of which projects and associations were created and financed in violation of law."

"The cooperative or communal farm projects which were created, financed and operated by FSA," the report goes on to say, "have all been dismal failures. They followed the Russian plan of collective farming . . . Not a single witness appeared before the committee in defense of such enterprises and every single witness familiar with the record admitted that such undertakings had been a great financial disappointment."

LARGE SUMS of money were spent on these farm colonies. Communities were built with homes, shops, warehouses, hotels, power plants, recreation centers, packing plants, canneries, factories, etc. FSA officials "made loans and grants of Federal funds according to their own wishes and desires and for just about everything from marriage licenses to burial expenses. They provided funds for the payment of lodge dues and poll taxes, for work stock, tractors and plows, and for farm implements of every kind and description." And along with this prodigal financing went plenty of advice. The FSA's tenants were told what to plant, how much to cultivate, where to sell their crops, and in some instances how many children they ought to have. Yet the colonies flopped.

It is difficult to decide which aspect of this sorry tale reflects the most discredit upon those responsible for it. Is it their gross misjudgment in trying to collectivize American farms? Or is it the inexcusable executive defiance of legislative policy? Congress, too, is far from being blameless in the matter, for it permitted an inept, and in part illegal, policy to be pursued for a decade before thoroughly investigating it?

If there is any credit at all to be found in this record, it lies in the candor of the Comptroller General and the Cooley Committee and in the recent efforts of the reorganized FSA to back away from the undemocratic brainstorm by which it was previously actuated.

House Set to Start Debate On Surplus Property Disposal

By Mary Spargo

With Congress looking hopefully toward a September 1 recess for political fence mending, the House will start debate today on the disposition of the Government's surplus war property variously estimated from 75 to 100 billion dollars.

Senate action on surplus property, the last reconversion bill that body must consider, is likely to lag two or three days behind the House. Senator Robert R. Reynolds, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, has called a meeting of his group today to consider surplus property bills, but indicated that it might take two or three days to reach a committee agreement.

After acting on surplus property the House must still consider the overall reconversion measure already passed by the Senate. The House Ways and Means Committee meets today to consider the Senate-adopted George bill, which leaves unemployment compensation int he hands of the States.

A bi-partisan drive, similar to that which sent the George bill through the Senate by an overwhelming majority, began shaping up in the House yesterday, emphasizing the congressional control in the hands of Southern Democrats and Republicans.

Leaders of the coalition were absolutely confident that they could repeat their Senate success in killing off the Murray-Kilgore bill, which would have established iron controls over American labor, and would have virtually federalized the unemployment compensation and the employment service of the States.

The George bill leaves unchanged State unemployment compensation standards, while the Murray-Kilgore measure would have established Federal maximums ranging from $20 to $35 weekly.

The House Postwar Economic Policy and Planning committee, of which Representative William Colmer (D., Miss.) is chairman, is expected to issue a report today advocating passage of the George reconversion bill.

Colmer is the author of the surplus property measure which the House will consider today. This was reported out of the House Committee on Executive Expenditures, of which Representative Carter Manasco (D., Ala.) is chairman.

Patman to Offer Amendments

At a Rules Committee session yesterday, Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) served notice he would offer a number of amendments from the House Small Business Committee of which he is chairman.

Patman said that inasmuch as the surplus property job is the biggest merchandising task in the country, a board, instead of an individual administrator should be created to handle it.

He said he would offer amendments also to have advisroy committees set up for each class of property, and to have veterans placed in a preferred status, under certain conditions to buy surplus property.

Patman also advocated an amendment which would necessitate congressional approval for the sale of any government plant valued at $5,000,000 or more.

Disposal by Owning Agency

Representative Charles L. Gifford (R., Mass.) failed to get approval from the rules group when he suggested that the disposal of surplus property should be left in the hands of the owning agencies under rules laid down by Congress. Gifford said he was opposed to further Government bureaus, and cited the Securities and Exchange Commission as "a wrecking commission."

The War Today

By Fletcher Pratt

Bombing Japan

THE DOUBLE B-29 raid on Nagasaki and Palembang is in a good many ways the most interesting of the series. The Japs have just taken Hengyang, a move whose primary strategic purpose is to strengthen their own lines of communication, but which had at least the secondary objective of eliminating airfields from which metropolitan Japan could be bombed. This raid demonstrates how wrong such a conception is; the B-29 has a longer reach than they imagined.

It is also the first fire-bomb raid on a large scale. For some time, in fact even before the war, aviators discussing fighting Japan have talked rather longingly about how those paper cities would burn if somebody gave them a good start. The reports of the Doolittle raid, slowly seeping through long after, make it clear that most of the damage done on that occasion was by fires, so the predictions were pretty much right. But in some places, especially those newly established, like Anshan in Manchuria, the latest target of the bombers, the Japs appear to have taken considerable precautions against fire. It has been creditably reported that a good many of the government offices and the establishments where a little burning would achieve a lot of results have been moved out of Tokyo and dispersed among the hills.

AT NAGASAKI this just wasn't possible. It is an industrial establishment and shipbuilding center. Dispersion might work as far as some of the plants were concerned—if the Japs had time and materials enough to effect it. But dispersion of the homes in which the workers live and of the subsidiary establishments that support them (stores, for instance) means really a great increase in the standard of living—isolated living quarters, much transportation equipment and so on. Ever since the war started Japan has been financing it by depressing the standard of living, and it is completely unlikely that they have done anything about the crowding at Nagasaki. We may take it, therefore, that a fire raid there is the most effective of all the methods.

Meanwhile, one point not covered in the reports so far published has been any explanation of the delay between B-29 raids. It is not very difficult to figure out the reason — gasoline shortage. China has none of her own and all that the big bombers use must at present be flown in over the hump by other airplanes. Bringing a B-29 up from a raiding and diversionary instrument to one which can effect really dangerous damage is largely a matter of relieving this shortage—and this in turn depends upon that minor military campaign in Burma to set up a new line of ground transport across the Himalayas.

Father T. J. Love Is Returning To Georgetown U.

The Rev. Thomas J. Love, S.J., who has been president of St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, since 1941, will rejoin Georgetown University as chairman of the department of physics in the College of Arts and Sciences, it was announced yesterday.

Father Love will take the place of Dr. Robert L. Mooney, who held the position in his absence. Dr. Mooney recently joined the staff of the Naval Research Laboratory.

Father Love entered the Society of Jesus in 1909 and studied philosophy, science and theology at the Jesuit House of Studies at Woodstock, Md., an affiliate of Georgetown. He has been connected with the university's physics department since World War I.

Free Lawn Mow Spurs Sales of War Bonds

To stimulate sales, Mrs. Mark offers potential customers one free lawn mow now with each bond purchase. The response has been so heavy that her lawn-mowing services have been booked for days in advance.

Allies Agreed On Governing Of Free France

By the Associated Press

The United States, Britain and the French National Committee are ready to sign formal agreements on civil administration of liberated French territory by the committee, it was learned last night.

The agreement lacks the status o fa treaty so is not subject to the time-consuming process of Senate ratification, and avoid any appearance of a political commitment to the French Committee.

A separate memorandum is being signed to provide for lend-lease shipments to the French.

The arrangements give General Dwight D. Eisenhower supreme authority in France so long as the war continues there.

Eisenhower is to retain direct control of all military areas, including the combat zones and rear-area supply depots and the like. He is to turn over to the French for civil administration all other rear areas. It is up to him to fix the limits of the military and non-military areas.

One unexpected clause in the agreements, which was written in at the insistence of American conferees, provides there should be no French censorship of Allied corriespondents in Frnace. That means that only military censorship can be applied.

Midwestern Drought Cuts Into Corn Crop

By the Associated Press

Dry weather over much of the Midwest east of the Mississippi yesterday had seared further an already badly damaged corn crop, caused further deterioration to soybeans and had left many Victory gardens total losses.

Conditions were worst and damage was heaviest in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky.

The Department of Agriculture, as of August 1, forecast a total corn crop of 2,929,117,000 bushels, a reduction of 51 million bushels from the previous month. This represented a loss of 83 million bushels in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, offset somewhat by gains west of the Mississippi.

Chicago Board of Trade authorities said corn yields had been cut further since the August 1 figures were compiled.

Ohio State University experts said Ohio's corn crop had been cut 50 per cent by the drought and that potatoes were almost a total loss. The only good crop in prospect was tomatoes. The last good rains there were in June, although thunderstorms late Saturday brought some relief.

One of Men Taken In Dope Raid Held For Grand Jury

Willard Hall, 23, of 442 K st. nw., arrested with five others Saturday on charges of violating narcotics laws, today awaits grand jury action after pleading guilty yesterday before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. He was released under $500 bond.

Lee Ah Sam, 35, and Ng Dick Yee, 31, both Chinese, of 616 H st. nw., and Earl F. Roberts, 25, of 415 Massachusetts ave. nw., were granted further hearing August 31. Cases of Percy B. Azerovitz, 30, and David Chan, 48, were indefinitely postponed.

Assistant U. S. Attorney John B. Diamond said yesterday he would seek an attachment to force the appearance in Municipal Court of Isadore Shuman, 36, filling station operator charged with violating ration regulations through illegal possession of 64 counterfeit gas coupons. Shuman, whose station is at 1139 Blaendsburg rd. ne., was scheduled for appearance yesterday but instead forfeited $500 collateral.

Missing Bolivian Mine Owner Reported Found

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 14 (AP).—Relatives of Mauricio Hochschild, wealthy Bolivian mine owner who has been missing since July 30, said tonight they had been told he had been found. No details were available.

Hochschild, German-born Argentine citizen, disappeared with Adolfo Blum, vice president of the huge Hochschild properties. Some friends had expressed belief Hochschild was kidnaped or killed by members of a secret Bolivian military group.

Navy Seizes 5 Machine Shops To Break West Coast Dispute

The Navy yesterday tok over operation of five San Francisco machine ssops on orders of President Roosevelt to smash a union ban on working more than 48 hours a week, which has seriously impeded war production.

Affected by the ban, which was imposed four months ago by the AFL International Association of Machinists in a contract dispute, were 104 San Francisco area machine shops, employing aproximately 4000 workers. The five shops seized were the largest, employing 1000, and have been affected most by the overtime ban, the War Labor Board said.

William H. Davis, chairman of WLB, in a letter to the President stated:

"The members of the board are hopeful that the seizure of those five plants will result in the removal of the ban."

A strike was in proress at the Federal Mogal Corp., one of the five seized shops, because the company refused to honor a union request to discharge employes who worked overtime in spite of the ban.

The order directed Navy Secretary James V. Forrestal to "permit the managements and plants taken under the provisions of this order to continue with their managerial functions to the maximum degree possible, consistent with the aims of this order."

The seizure automatically makes any interference with the plants' operation a crime under the Connally-Smith Antistrike Act.

It was understood action was belated because of Navy reluctance to seize the plants, and only after the WPB pressed for action over Navy resistance because the continued defiance had impaired the WPB's prestige on the Pacific Coast.

From 11 to 22 per cent of needed working hours have been lost because of the overtime ban, the board said. Production of Diesel engines at one plant was reduced approximately 30 per cent.

In additio nto Mogul, plants seized were: Pacific Gear & Tool Works, the Link-Belt Co. (Pacific Division), U. S. Pipe & Manufacturing Co., and Eenterprise Engine & Foundry Co.

Winant's Marine Son Eager for Clash With Japs

By a Marine Correspondent

Linda Vista, Camp Elliott, Calif., Aug. 14.—(Distributed by United Press).—Because no one in his family has fought the Japs, Marine Pfc. Rivington R. Winant, 18, son of John G. Winant, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, is anxious to see action in the Pacific.

A field telephone lineman, young Winant is a member of the Twenty-ninth Marines, reinforced. His brother, First Lieut. John G. Winant, jr., pilot of a Flying Fortress shot down over Germany last October, is a prisoner of war.

Winant, a Princeton University student until he entered the Marine Corps six months ago, said his father "is quite proud that I'm a Marine." His home is at Concord, N. H.

Post-war Cotton Exports will protect WHEAT GROWERS

THE cotton states can produce wheat—and follow it with a crop of soybeans or leguminous hay on the same land in the same season. In cotton states of the southeast, wheat acreage has increased 180% since 1930. The second largest cotton state last year produced more wheat per acre than any major wheat state.

American cotton farmers normally have sold one-half their crop to foreign markets, then used their cash to buy wheat from other areas. Reclamation of cotton's export trade in postwar years will save wheat growers from losing cotton farmers as customers, and from gaining them as desperate and determined competitors.

Bosox Beat Browns, 5-1, On O'Neill 4-Hitter

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Cardinals went off the board yesterday. That's bookmakers' parlance for no more bets. They've had their fill of it and they aren't quoting odds against the Cardinals any more. The bookies called it quits last Sunday after posting odds of 4 to 1 on Brooklyn in each game of a doubleheader with the Cardinals, and getting few takers.

POVICH

"I've never seen anything like it," said Washington's largest betting commissioner yesterday. "No big league team was ever 1 to 4, before. But that's what you have to lay to get business. The customers won't take the Cardinals' opposition at less than 4 to 1, and that's bad business for us. We just decided to forget about the Cardinals."

Thus the Cardinals have one distinction the Yankees never owned even when they were the supposed invincibles of the big leagues. You could always get a bet down on the Yankees even when they were running away with pennants. And 2-to-1 was a big price against the Yankees' opposition.

Four-to-one odds in a big league ball game are tremendous, of course. The uncertainties of baseball being what they are, it's almost the equivalent of 1-to-20 in a horse race. The Nats, after losing 11 in a row, were less than 2 to 1 against Boston. Big odds in a baseball game is 8 to 5. With all due respect to the Cardinals who are leading the league by 17½ games, the bookies can be forgiven for wanting no parts of the 4-to-1 odds they are asked to lay by the customers who won't take less.

That second game of Sunday's double-header in Boston which the Browns won by a 6-1 score was probably the most important game of the season for the St. Louis club, at least for it's psychological value. They had moved into Boston for a series with the second-place Red Sox, and lost the opening game when they couldn't hold a one-run lead in the ninth.

Here was the invitation for the Browns to fold and blow both games of the double-header. If they did, it might have a tremendous effect on both the Browns and the Red Sox. Certainly it would not have done the Browns' morel any good to drop two to the second-place club. The whole league was waiting for the Browns to collapse. But they showed they had the bounce by lambasting the Boston pitching in the second game and getting an even break for the day. An even break didn't hurt the Browns, but it was a blow to the Red Sox, who have ground to make up.

The Browns are demonstrating that games won in April are fully as important as victories in August. That nine-game winning streak at the start of the season is one reason the Browns are out in front. It fortified them against the slump that followed until they could aright themselves again.

Joe Sewell's club also has to its credit a ten-game winning streak. Those two Brownie streaks are just a bit amaziing because they don't own the kind of a pitching staff that figures to go unbeaten over a long stretch. It's testimony to the balance of the Browns. When they got a badly-pitched game, they had power enough to win anyway. There'll probably be no catching 'em.

This is the year when the Detroit Lions could break the monopoly of the Chicago Bears and the Green Bay Packers on the Western Division championship of the National Football League. Coach Gus Dorais got a windfall when Bob Westfall, Michigan's famed fullback of 1939-40-41, joined the team after getting a medical discharge from the Army.

Dorais will have a potent pair in his backfield in Westfall and the celebrated 4-F Frankie Sinkwich. Sinkwich is making holdout gestures, but he'll doubtless sign with the Lions. He's already working out with the University of Georgia team, and certainly not for his health, but with another year in the pro league as his incentive.

Westfall and Sinkwich are pro football naturals. Sinkwich demonstrated last season with the Lions that he is the type to do well with the pros. He was one of the chief scoring threats in the league. Westfall's play for Michigan where he ran, passed and kicked was also of the pro league pattern. Dorias could use them in the same or different backfields. It's a beautiful choice he's confronted with.

Nelson Ties Quaker Pro With a 69

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 14 (AP).—Putting together a subpar 36, 33—69, Morrie Gravatt, Wililamsport, Pa., staked himself to at least a temporary lead today among early fimishers in the first round of 36-hole qualifying of the 1944 National PGA championship.

Gravatt, a slim Army service rejectee who spent 18 months helping build the Alsaska Highway, played well in every department to take the heavily wooded Manito course to pieces in his opening round.

It enabled him to set the pace for some better known fellow pros, notably, Harold McSpaden of Philadelphia, leading bond winner this year, who finished his first 18 with a 36—34—70. Par for the layout is a pair of 36s.

Gravatt hustled two birdies on the first nine but lost a stroke with a bogey. He came back with another pair of birds on the incoming nine.

Gravett failed to hold his exclusive lead for long. Byron Nelson, tournament favorite, former U. S. Open and P. G. A. titlist, equalled the 69 with a 36-33. He rapped in three birdies, on the tenth, seventeenth and eighteenth holes.

Nelson's card:

Meanwhile the course proved more tough for such fellows as W. A. Stackhouse of Sequin, Tex., and Neil Christian, Spokane, both veterans of major tournament play. They posted 73's. oNt bad but not sufficient to knock at the big money door among the $20,000 prize monies.

Other crackshots who bumped into trouble included Fay Coleman, Los Angeles, with a 76 and Harry Nettelbladt, Avon, Conn., with a 75.

Nettelbladt has some excuse. He works 56 hours a week in a war plant and teaches golf during the day. He took his vacation to play in the championship.

Five Reasons Why Cardinals Are Setting Pace

Pace Setters' Lead Sliced To 5½ Tilts

Boston, Aug. 14 (AP).—With Right-hander Emmett O'Neill tossing four-hit ball, the oBston Red Sox today reduced the St. Louis Browns' to 5½ games by defeating those American League pace-setters, 5-1.

O'Neill, winner of his three previous starts, limited the Browns to two hits until the ninth, when George McQuinn's double and Vern Stephens' single cheated him out of a shutout.

The Sockers hammered Starter Denny Galehouse, who was striving for his sixth straight win, for 11 of their 12 hits and all of their runs before he was relieved for a pinch hitter in the eighth inning.

None of the Red Sox was able to reac hfirst base until they teed off against Galehouse for six singles an dthree tallies in the sixth inning.

The other two Boston tallies were made in the seventh when, with two out, Leon Culberson hit safely and George Metkovich parked a homer, his fifth of the season, into the right field stands.

Chisox Error In 13th Gives Yanks 2-1 Win

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Third Baseman Ralph Hodgin's low peg on Rollie Hemsley's grounder allowed Johnny Lindell to score from second base with the winning run as the New York Yankees nosed out the Chicago White Sox, 2-1, in 13 innings. Lindell had doubled with two out to set the stage for the decisive play.

Johnny Humphries appeared on his way to a shutout win with the help of the run scored on Thurman Tucker's double, Vince Castino's sacrifice and Skeeter Webb's single in the fifth, but Nick Etten spoiled that with his thirteenth homer of the year in the ninth, tying the count.

Buck Ross, who took over when Humphries was lifted for a pinch-hitter, was charged with his sixth loss, and Ernie Bonham, who went all the way, scattering nine hits, grabbed his ninth win.

Eastern Grid Body Kills Fumble Rule

New York, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association in an unprecedented and defiant meeting, today made drastic revisions in football rules and charged the parent National Collegiate Athletic Association with "inaction" in the face of many needed changes.

The most revolutionary revision was the abolition of the controversial fumble rule, instituted several years ago ,which grounded as a "dead ball" all fumbles, regardless of which side recovered.

Under the revision by the Eastern body, a recovered fumble may be advanced by either team.

Taking a cue from the professionals, who have opened up offensive play by liberalizinf forward passing regulations, the Eastern Association voted to permit forward passing from any point behind the line of scrimmage instead of the five yards distance now required under N. C. A. A. regulations.

The other revisions provide for prohibition of the much criticized out-of-bound kickoff, the use of a one inch artificial tee on kickoffs from placement, and general clarification of the vague off-side rule.

Asa S. Bushnell, commissioner of Eastern intercollegiate athletics who called the meeting, said that "these rule changes will make college football the most interesting and exciting game ever played on the gridiron."

"Inaction" Deplored

William A. Reid, Colgate athletic director and president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association, said that the meeting was called because members deplored the continued "inaction" of the NCAA.

"We were disappointed by the failure of the NCAA rules committee to meet this year," he said. "Our organization has always felt very strongly that the college game should never stand still, but should be continually improved."

Reid said that the coaches at Eastern colleges decided to go a step further than Lieut. Col. William J. Bingham, chairman of the NCAA rules committee, who recommended "gentleman's agreements" in the absence of official changes.

In a meeting of the NCAA Football Coaches Association here earlier this year, the group, headed by Lou Little of Columbia University, recommended abolition of the out-of-bounds kickoff "after the war" but said no official changes could be made because the rules had been "frozen for the duration."

Walters Wins 17th as Reds Top Giants, 6-3

Cincinnati, Aug. 14 (AP).—Buckey Walters became the first National League pitcher to record his seventeenth victory today as the Cincinnati Reds handed the New York Giants their seventh straight loss, 6-3. It was the Reds' fifth successive triumph.

Five hits, including Eric Tipton's double, gave the Reds two in the second but the Giants came back to tie on a walk, Buddy Kerr's double an eror and Joe Medwick's single. Cincinnati chased starter Jack Brewer and continued on Rube Fischer for three in the third on four blows, including another double by Tipton and the Reds added another in the fifth. Singles by Leon Treadway, Billy Jurges and Medwick accounted for the other Giant score in the eighth.

Pirates Gain Second-Place Tie With Reds

Pittsburgh, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates went into a tie for second place in the National League today by winning two games from the Boston Braves, the second one a two-hitter for preacher Roe. The ,rst game, playoff of an eight-inning 5-5 tie July 2, ended 7 to 6; the other, 5 to 0.

The second game with the eighth consecutive triumph for the surging Buccaneers and gave Roe his ninth victory of the year. Rip Sewell got credit for his thirteenth win in the other contest.

Charlie "Red" Barrett, pitching four innings of the unfinished game, was charged with its loss, and was debited with his second defeat of the day when the Pirates chased him to the showers in the sixth inning of the nightcap.

Texas High Coach to Use Rockne Plays

Beaumont, Tex., Aug. 14 (AP).—Plays the great Knute Rockne never lived to,se may blossom on the gridiron of South Park High School this season.

It was the day before the football master of the fighting Irish met death in a plane crash in 1931 that Paul Tyson, builder of champions at Waco High School in Texas, received from Rockne at his home a booklet containing two dozen plays diagrammed in "The Rock's" own hand.

Rockne explained he was going to use those plays in the coming season but that he was making a present of them to his friend. Tyson, that season on leave of absence from Waco High, and in the years that followed, forgot about the gift.

He came across it just the other day.

"I may uuse some of those plays this fall," mused the tall, spare mentor. "They are all great."

Tyson is Texas' dean of coaches. He will be opening his thirty-first season next month.

He started at Denison High, then was for 27 years coach at Waco, where his teams won four State championships and were in the finals seven times. He came to South Park in 1942. Last year his team, built from the ground up, won the city championship.

Cornish Hills Wins Hunter Title

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—Cornish Hills, owned and ridden by Mrs. W. Haggin Perry of Cobham, captured the 1944 hunter championship at the Bath County Horse Show here Saturday.

Regarded as the outstanding hunter in Virginia, Cornish Hills took first-place ribbons in every class in which he was entered.

Substtiution, the Meander Farm entry, won the reserve championship with 13 points.

Mosby, a 3-year-old gelding owned by Independent Livery of Hot Springs, won the jumper championship with 15 points. The reserve championship in this event went to Miss Ebo of the Homestead Stables, with eight points.

Md. Hunter Show Booked Sept. 8-10

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—The largest number of horses ever to be exhibited in a Maryland show is expected at the second annual Maryland Hunter Show, to be held at the Worthington Valley Hunt Show grounds September 8, 9 and 10.

Hunters representing leading stables in Maryland and other Eastern States have been entered. Hugo R. Hoffman, secretary of the show, said that a number of handsome challenge trophies have been renewed.

Proceeds from the show will be used to buy hospital equipment for the rehabilitation of war casualties.

Navy, Marine Trainees Try New Sport

State College, Pa., Aug. 14 (AP).—Navy and Marine trainees at Pennsylvania State College are playing a new and so far nameless sport—a combination of basketball and boxing.

The players don 16-ounce gloves and try for haymakers when any opponent attempts to dribble or shoot for the basket.

It teaches a man "to take a punch in the mouth," says Lieut. Harry Light, former William and Mary athlete and now Navy V-12 physical director.

Wanted: Linemen With Brains; Apply to Army Coach Blaik

By Oscar Fraley

West Point, N. Y., Aug. 14 (U.P.).—Lieut. Col. Earl (Red) Blaik, coach of Army's football forces, would like tonight to put an advertisement in the newspapers—"Wanted: Linemen—with brains."

For Blaik, and Army, are virtually destitute along that line as plans are made for a rugged nine-game 1944 schedule. And all the aid must come from the new class of Plebes, or those that stay eligible.

"That's the real difficulty," the genial red-head explained. "We'll probably get a fair line out of the new candidates, but then you never know how many of them are going to stay eligible. You know, it's a tough grind up here at the point these days from a scholastic standpoint."

Red isn't complaining despite the fact that he doesn't have a single football player on hand at the moment. The entire Cadet corps has gone on maneuvers to Pine Camp and won't return until August 31. He won't be able to call his first practice until September 5, a matter of 25 days before the opening game with North Carolina.

Backfield Situation Great

"Most of our opponents, including Navy, will have had a heap of practice before we get started," he said. "So that's another handicap. But one nice thing is that we can concentrate on building that line of ours, because the backfield situation is well in hand."

Blaik can say that again. Because he has six experienced ball carriers returning from last season, plus several ne wadditions. The best news for Army men is that Glenn Davis, the fleet Californian, has returned to the academy on the plains above the Hudson after brushing u pon the studies which caused hi mto be busted out after last football season.

Then there's Capt. Tom Lomardo, Max Minor, Bob Dodds, big George troxell and Doug Kenna. Much was expected of Kenna last season but he spent virtually the whole season on the bench with injuries. Now, however, he looks like he might make the grade.

Woes On the Line

That forward wall, however, is where the trouble lies. Last season, as Army won seven, dropped two, and tied one, it was one of the best in the country under the direction of Capt. Casimer Myslinski, the All-American center from Steubenville, Ohio. But those men are gone now and the only one first stringer, Tackle Joe Stanowicz, will be back in line.

The Army schedule, after North Carolina, has the Cadets facing Brown, October 7; Pitt, 14; Coast Guard Academy, 21; Duke at the Polo Grounds, 28; Villanova, November 4; Notre Dame at Yankee Stadium, 11; Penn at Philadelphia, 18, and Navy, December 2. There's no word yet on the site of the Navy game but indications are that it may return to Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium.

Former Ram Coach Predicts Grid Boom

New Orleans (AP).—Lieut. Art Lewis, former player-coach of the Cleveland Rams, predicts a boom for the pro grid game after the war.

"C r g a nization of professional teams on the Pacific Coast should help the game a great deal," Lewis says. "Any way you look at it, pro football is going to grow by leaps and bounds when this war is over."

Everything Happens in Brooklyn

By Chip Royal

Brooklyn, Aug. 14 (AP).—The fans expect almost anything to happen here but fiery Ben Chapman, fast, slugging major league outfielder of the 30's, fooled them when he returned to the big show as a pitcher for the Dodgers.

"Why, dat Yankee bum will be knocked on his sayso before he even gits started," moaned many of the faithful. "It shouldn't happen to a Giant that a discarded American Leaguer be any good," cried others.

So about 18,000 of the Flatbush flock defied the heat (it was the hottest night of the year) and went to Ebbets Field to give that old jeer to Ben.

By now, everybody knows they remained to cheer a new pitching and batting hero, a husky 35-year-old comebacker.

After the game, Ben was all smiles in the locker room.

"Maybe I can make something out of this after all," he exclaimed. "Frankly, I wasn't too confident befort the game started, but once I got out there, my baseball experience helped me to shake off the jitters."

Asked what he was throwing to fool the Boston Braves, Ben replied:

"I haven't too much stuff. I throw a little of everything and try to throw every pitch with a little different speed.

"When I was a big league outfielder trying to make my living with base-hits, change of pace pitching bothered me most, and my experience as a pitcher thus far persuades me that it bothers the other hitters, too."

Durocher added a few raves of his own about Chapman.

"You saw a smart pitcher out there tonight," said Leo, "and a good competitor. He's got plenty of stuff and he'll fool a lot of hitters."

Of course Durocher's statement will have to wait for time but Ben certainly looked good on the mound.

He threw about everything at the Braves — even a blopper pitch. His best serve seemed to be a side-arm sweeper but he's equally good with his fast one.

Slower than he was when he stole 61 bases for the Yankees in 1931, Chapman has not lost his batting eye, as he proved with a base-clearing double that made the fans delirious.

One thing is sure, the fans have another idol to go with Dixie Walker, and the club has a colorful ballplayer who knows how to punch.

Two Ballplayers Attacked, Knifed

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (AP).—Two Seattle, Wash., baseball players were taken t oa hospital with knife wounds early today after reporting to police that they were cut by two assailants on a downtown street corner.

Radio patrol officers J. M. Doctors and R. E. Brown reported that William Rerflinger, 24, cetner fielder, and Gene Holt, 23, southpaw pitcher, said two Negroes approached them as they wer laughing and talking. The ball players said the Negroes made some remark about "objecting to ridicule," then lashed them with knives nad fled.

Sinkwich Denies He Is Holdout

Athens, Ga., A ug. 14 (AP).—Former All-America Frankie Sinkwich said here toda ythere was nothing to reports from Detroit that he was holding out for more mney to play professional footbal with the Detroit Lions.

He said he had not received a contract from the Lions and that he had not discussed salary terms with Lew Cromwell, general manager of the Lions, who has been quoted as saying the former George star's salary demands were "ridiculous."

He said he was in Athens "just for a visit," and was not working out with the Georgia squad.

South American Fight Promoter in U. S. Army

Nesh, a sergeant, recently returned from action in North Africa and Sicily. Born in Venezuela, he has been a naturalized citizen since 1936 and in the Army since Pearl Harbor.

Among the many contests which he promoted in South America was the Sixto Escobar-Simon Chavez bout.

Jockey Wright Rides Double At Belmont

Belmont Park, N. Y., Aug. 14 (AP).—A jockey, rather than any particular event or horse, commanded most interest here this sweltering afternoon. Veteran Wayne Wright, who was a United State Coast Guardsman until he received a medical discharge some weeks ago due to an old leg injury, got his biggest thrill since leaving the service by riding both winners in today's daily double, with $101.10 for the usual $2.

"Goldie," as the blond pilot is known to his fellow saddlesmiths, guided J. B. Partridge's Arthur J., to a five lengths triumph in the opener, then came right back in the second race to take one of the tightest photo decisions of the year astride the Barrington Stable's Awashonks. Arthur J., owned by one of Wright's old employers, paid $16.90, while Awashonks returned $18.60.

Wright, who achieved considerable distinction working for the late J. E. Widener and other big establishments, has been riding in his old-time form of late, putting over his share of the winners. He entered the Coast Guard last fall. His absence from racing failed to dull his riding edge. The quiet-mannered young man from Idaho not only won this double, but he had to "put it on' 'one of the strongest and most famous jockeys in the land—Eddie Arcaro—to get Awashonks' nose first past the wire.

Arcaro's mount, Greentree Stable's Piquant, was a 9-to-10 favorite in the field of six juvenile platers and looked all over a winner most of the 6-furlong trip down the straightaway. However, there were those who thought the usually reliable Arcaro took victory for granted a furlough or so from home. Wright, who had gained gradually with Awashonks, stole up on the outside to collar the favorite in the final drive. Arcaro then rode his hardest but Piquant could not regain his earlier pace and bowed i the thrilling duel to the payoff line. Cabourg, an outsider, finished eight lengths back in third position.

Boots Japs and Horses

Camden, N. J., Aug. 14 (AP).—Jockey Willie Cook is in his thirteenth season as a racing rider, but he isn't worried about any jinx.

The 19-year-old Arizonan, who was discharged from the Army Air Force last winter after two years in the South Pacific, explains:

On my fourteenth mission, Jap antiaircraft fire riddled our bomber near New Guinea. We made it back with one man dead.

"Funny part of it was that the day before we were so happy about getting past our thirteenth mission. Then bang! The next trip out we get it good."

Cook himself received numerous shrapnel wounds in the back and legs. He received a medical discharge and the Purple Heart.

He's happy riding horses again, but finds it far less exciting than bombing Japs. He's ridden several winners in his thirteenth season—and expects the campaign to be his best.

Devil Diver To Carry 117 Pounds Today

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Devil Diver, Mrs. Payne Whitney's swift veteran, and Princequillo, from the Boone Hall Stables and the 1943 marathon king, each will carry 117 pounds tomorrow in the seventeenth annual $15,000 added Whitney Stakes for 3-year-olds and up.

Devil Diver started off the year as if to clean up all the honors in the handicap division but was slowed down by an injury in early summer. Princequillo, winner of his last two starts, also "is good again and deserves to start," says Trainer Dave Englander.

The pair will have only three rivals, Alex Barth, Bolingbroke and Wait-a-Bit. Mrs. Ed Mulrenan's First Fiddle, also a candidate for handicap honors, was not named to start.

Florida Gridders Start Field Drills Today

Gainesville, Fla., Aug. 14 (AP).—The University of Florida football squad will don uniforms Tuesday and get down to rigorous training after three weeks of preliminary practce.

Backfield Coach Bob Pitman has been drilling candidates on the "T" formation that will be used by Florida this year.

The Gators will open the 1944 season with the University of Mississippi in Jacksonville, September 30.

Winner With Fillies

New York (AP).—The last two fillies to win the Hambletonian were driven by Henry Thomas, who has piloted three winners. He won with Shirley aHnover in 1937 and scored this year with Yankee Maid.

12 Chicago Bears Told to Reduce; Face $50 Fines

Collegeville, Ind., Aug. 14 (AP).—The Chicago Bears, preparing for their meeting with the College All-Stars at Evanston, Ill., on August 30, have decided to do something about their "beef trust"—a dozen portly gents pounds over their playing weight.

Unles sthe corpulent 12 shorten their reaches at the training table and reduce their poundage considrably before the All-Star game, they'll be "fined" $50 each.

For instance, Tackle Al Babartsky, former Fordham star, has to cut down fro 240 to 225. Others who'll have to go on a restricted died include Bulldog Turner, 258; Gary Famiglietti, 249; Jame Sweeney, 259; Ed Simonich, 237; Doug McEnulty, 237; Don Sigillo, 235; Fred Mundee, 227; Elmo Kelly, 225; Jimmy Fordham, 225; Paul Podmajesky, 224, and Peter Gudauskas, 225.

The Bears have not progressed beyon dthe tackling dummy stage in their contact work, postponing scrimmages until the yrookie-studded squad masters T-formation blueprints.

Offstage Effects Add To Mysterv-Play Creeps

McConnelsville, Ohio (U.P.).—Even the cast was puzzled when the senior class of the local high school presented "Drums," a mystery play set in a mansion in the swamp country.

In the first place, a frog which was no stage prop created atmosphere with its croaking.

Then a bat got into the auditorium and soared over the audience.

And the final unexpected touch came when one of the characters cautiously listened and spoke the line: "What was that?"

In the distance the town clock solemnly tolled nine times.

Phillies Win 4th Straight as Cubs Bow, 6-1

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—The uprising Philadelphia Phillies won their fourth straight game today when southpaw Ken Raffensberger held the Cubs to only one run on 11 hits and beat them, 6 to 1.

It was the eighth defeat in nine games for the Chicagoans, who still maintained their slim hold on a first division berth.

Buster Adams' twelfth homer and a triple by Tony Lupien paced the Phils' 11-hit attack against Bill Fleming, Ed Hanyzewski and Mack Stewart.

Five of the runs were scored off Fleming in his four-inning stint, ending a five-game winning streak for the Cub hurler.

Individual Honor

Beau Jack is the only fighter in recent New York history to be a principal in three bouts attracting more than $100,000. He drew $104,076 with Henry Armstrong, $111,954 in his third meeting with Montgomery and $132,823 with Davis.

District Recreation Tennis Slated This Weekend

Two novel tennis tournaments, one for men and one for women, are scheduled this weekend on the Sixteenth and Kennedy courts, both annual affairs sponsored by the District Recreation Department. The men's, to be supervinsed by Tony Latona, net coach at Friend's School, will begin play at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, while the women's, to be handled by Maude Parker of the Recreation Department, will open Sunday at 2 o'clock with singles matches only. Early next week the doubles will follow.

Any woman player in the city may enter the tourney for the fair sex, but a special list of eligibility rules will be in order for the male title matches. They will be closed to any player in the first 10 of the District rankings during the last two years or to any player who has reached the semifinal ruond of any one of the three major local tournaments in the last two years (City of Washington, Middle Atlantic and District of Columbia). The tournament committee—Richard S. Tennyson, District Recreation Department; Tony Latona, Austin Rice, Bill Shreve and Bernard McCarthy—also reserves the right to refuse the entry of any player whose ranking or play is considered superior to the best interests of the tournament. However, there are no restrictions, the main idea being only to keep out top-grdae players.

Feature of the women's tournament will be consolation competition, open to all players who have been put out before the quarter-finals, which will start about the middle of the week. Members of the women's tennis committee in charge of the tourney are Maude Parker, Catherine Wassman, Betty Zimmerman and Camille Craig.

Entry fees will be a dollar each for both men and women doubles contestants, $1.50 for women's singles and $2 for men's singles. Fees must be paid in person or by mail to Bill Shreve at the Tennis Shop, 1141 15th st. nw. While final details of the deadlines for entries will be made late this week, indications are the ywill be Friday at 6 p. m. for the men's singles and Saturday at 6 p. m. for the women's singles.

Braille School Has Own Band And Orchestra

Faribault, Minn. (U.P.).—Band and orchestra of the Braille and Sight Saving School of Minnesota gave their annual concert this spring, signifying that Martin A. Steppan, former member of the St. Louis Symphony, again had succeeded in a painstaking task.

He plays the part for each student until the latter has memorized it, then plays the lead with the student accompanying him. When each player has mastered his part, they are brought together in small sections, and finally as an entire organization for practice.

Years of training precede the time of eligibility for the band or orchestra, limited to the school's older children.

Ready Accident Reference

Seattle (U.P.).—A "mechanical master mind" that will answer a thousand questions about traffic accidents is the latest addition to police department equipment. By pressing a button, traffic officials can learn in a few minutes data from traffic accident reports, including the cause and number of persons injured, and age, race and occupation of drivers involved.

JOIN GULF'S "Anti-Breakdown" Club TODAY!

Here's Gulf's Protective Maintenance Plan

• Before this war is over, there may be only two kinds of people in America . . .

1. those who can still get to work in automobiles,
2. those who are forced to walk.

If you want to be in the fortunate group who will still ride to work in automobiles, join Gulf's "Anti-Breakdown" Club today. How do you do it? Just come in for Gulf's Protective Maintenance Plan!

This plan was conceived by experts in car care. Gulf developed it because car maintenance is a most important civilian job. (The Government says civilian car maintenance is one of the services essential to winning the war because 8 out of 10 war workers use automobiles to get to work.)

Protect your car at 39 danger points!

GULF'S Protective Maintenance Plan includes Gulflex Registered Lubrication, which reaches up to 39 vital engine, chassis, and body points. Six special Gulflex Lubricants are used. They reduce wear, and make your car last longer.

Save those bearings and piston rings!

THE OFFICE of Defense Transportation and the American Petroleum Institute recommend changing oil regularly. And it's equally important to use a good motor oil . . . an oil like Gulfpride, "The World's Finest Motor Oil," or Gulflube, an extra-quality oil that costs a few cents less. Protect your motor from undue wear!

Make those tires last longer!

ASK YOUR GULF DEALER to have your tires recapped, adding greatly to their length of service. Ask him to inspect for cuts and bruises, and make needed repairs . . . to check air pressures, and inflate tires properly.

Gasoline powers the attack . . . Don't waste a drop!

Watch that front end!

Fairfax Seeks To Complete Service Roll

Arlington, Fairfax Bureau of The Post, 1630 North Buchanan St. Tel. CH. 3239.

An appeal for information on the names of all Fairfax County men and women in the armed forces has been made by the committee in charge of the Honor Roll Plaque for Fairfax County.

Committee members pointed out that it has not been possible to get an accurate check, and said that names should be mailed to Cecil Brown, at Police Headquarters, Fairfax, Va., immediately, in order that the Honor Roll may be brought up to date.

Voters Forums Planned

A seriec of nonpartisan discussions of the issues involved in the November elections will be held in Voters Forums planned for the weeks prior to the election by the advisory committee to the Fairfax County Voters League.

Plans for the forums were made recently at a meeting held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene S. Duffield in Falls Church. Joseph C. McCaskill, chairman of the advisory committee to the league, is being assisted in arranging the discussions by the Rev. Alexander C. Zabriskie, James U. Kincheloe, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Howrey, Mrs. Francis Pickens Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dennis, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Domeratzky, John Graham, jr., Lieut. John C. Baker and Stanley P. Stewart.

Carnival Opens

The Annandale Volunteer Fire Department carnival opened last night and will continue through Saturday, beginning at 7 p. m. daily.

Proceeds of the carnival will be applied to the department's building fund, which will be used for a fire house and community hall. Dudley C. Webb is general chairman of the carnival committee.

Librarian's New Post

Seymour Robb of Herndon, a staff member of the Library of Congress and an affiliate of the Office of the Alien Property Custodian, has been appointed librarian of the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University.

Robb, who received his A. B. degree in libary science from George Washington University in 1937, is a member of the American Library Association, the District of Columbia Library Association, the Inter-American Bibliographic and Library Association, the Florida Historical Association and Phi Sigma Kappa. His wife and daughter will join him in New York about September 1.

Herndon Legion Elects

Newly elected officers of Herndon American Legion Auxiliary have been announced as follows: Mrs. Clarence R. Bradshaw, president; Miss Virginia McFarland, vice president; Mrs. Jane Davis, secretary; Mrs. Otey Burton, treasurer; Mrs J. M. Hughes, chaplain; Mrs. Floyd H. Kidwell, historian, and Mrs. Jessie M. Hughes, sergeant at arms. The officers will be installed in September.

The Herndon Auxiliary also has elected two alternates to attend the State convention in Roanoke this month. They are Mrs. Harry Breckenridge and Mrs. Clarence R. Bradshaw, delegates, and Mrs. F. Y. Bain and Mrs. J. M. Hughes, alternates.

200 Windows Blasted

Baltimore, Aug. 14 (AP).—A lithographing machine exploded today at the Continental Can Co. plant, blowing out 200 panes of glass, wrecking another machine and driving about 10 employes out of the building. None of them was injured. There was no fire.

Only 7.41% Unpaid

Collection Of Taxes Up In Arlington

Arlington, Fairfax Bureau of The Post, 1630 North Buchanan St. Tel. CH. 3239.

A higher percentage of Arlington County's 1943 tax bills have been collected than were reported paid at thi stime last year, according to County Treasurer John Locke Green.

Only 7.41 per cent of the county's 1943 tax bills, amounting to $149,194.08, remain uncollected, out of a total assessment of $2,013,567.17, while 8.17 per cent was uncollected last year, when the assessment was $1,827,914.15.

Green also reported that the 1944 real estate tax bills, due on or before December 5, are now ready and that local taxpayers may call and pay them at the treasurer's office. They will be mailed out later.

To Announce Chairmen

Chairman of committees of the Arlington Board of Trade will be announced at a special dinner meeting of the board's directors, to be held tomorrow night at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The Board of Trade, which recently opened permanent offices on Wilson blvd. at Edgewood st., is campaigning for the control of rats through education of residents, and recently announced it would seek an ordinance prohibiting trash-burning, in an effort to eliminate rats in Arlington County.

To Name Delegates

Delegates to the State convention of the American Legion will be elected at a meeting of the Auxiliary of Arlington Post of the Legion, which will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Legion Clubhouse on North Washington blvd. The State convention will be held in Roanoke August 20.

Firemen to Meet

The condition of Arlington County's fire equipment will be discussed at a meeting of the county's Volunteer Firemen's Association, which will be held tonight at 8 p. m. at the Ballston fire engine house. Representatives of the various volunteer companies will attend.

To Map Activities

Plans for activities of the Women's League of the Arlington Jewish Community Center during the coming year will be discussed at a meeting of the league's executive board to be held Thursday, August 17, at 3150 Wilson blvd. Mrs. Marvin H. Levenberg is chairman of the group. Next full meeting of the league will be held September 11.

McCracken Pets Sought

A number of persons want to take some of the dogs which Mrs. Clara McCracken has been ordered to dispose of by Fairfax County Court, it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Paul Twyne, president of the Animal Welfare League of Arlington, said that league representatives will investigate the homes in which the dogs are desired and said that three of Mrs. McCracken's 30 pets had been destroyed because of their physical condition.

Naval Paper Uses Nautical Numbers

Bainbridge, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Pages of The Mainsheet, official weekly newspaper of the Bainbridge Naval Training Center, are "numbered" nautically.

This week's 10-page paper, for example, carries these headings on Pages 2 to 10: "Port bow, starboard bow, forward of beam, starboard beam, port beam, abaft the beam, port quarter, starboard quarter, stern."

Telephone Keeps Mrs. Baker Busy After Husband's Ship Wages Duel Off Cherbourg

U. S. S. TEXAS TALK: "For goodness sakes, don't mention me," wailed Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, "I haven't done anything!" I was urging her to tell me something about herself, all by way of bringing her into the spotlight now centering on her husband, Captain Baker . . . As you know, he's the courageous commander of that proud old queen of the older fleet, the U. S. S. Texas, which waged a three-hour duel with the powerful German coastal batteries off Cherbourg the other day, and came off with flying colors.

Of course I'm one who can never forget the little woman behind the big man—even when she insists on being forgotten . . . I know Mrs. Baker has done her share of wartime work here; has been active with both the Stage Door Canteen and the Red Cross, and but for an accident resulting in a broken leg last October would have been even more so . . . The daughter of the family, Miss Patricia Fairfield Baker, who made her bow to society in December, 1941, has been employed at the British Air Commission the past year and a half.

Shortly after Virginia-born Captain Baker was put in command of the USS Texas, he was made an honorary citizen of the Lone Star State . . . "Now, maybe I can vote," said Mrs. Baker, who has been a ballot-less Washingtonian for a number of years . . . She may be able to, if she ever finds any free time from answering her telephone . . . It rang steadily from the moment accounts of the valiant fight of the U. S. S. Texas hit the headlines early yesterday morning, and telegrams from relatives and friends all over the country poured in to the Baker home on 30th st. . . . "It's all wonderful," said Mrs. Baker," but not for me. I just happen to be another wife, waiting at home, for a man who is only doing his duty on the firing line."

MEMO ON MEMOIRS: Ghost writer, but a ghost no longer, for Col. Edmund Starling's memoirs is Thomas Sugrue of Clearwater Beach, Fla. . . . At one time on the staff of American Magazine and later with the New York Herald Tribune, he's the author of several books, including "There Is A River" and "Such Is the Kingdom." . . . Publisher of the Starling tome will be announced shortly . . . David E. Kahn is in charge of handling arrangements for all Colonel Starling's memoirs . . . The colonel, with the approval of the White House, turned over all his information to Kahn nearly a year ago.

LUCE AND A LAWYER: My political spy in Bridgeport, Conn., reports that 29-year-old Margaret Eleanor Connors, Democratic contender for Representative Clare Boothe Luce's seat in Congress, is firmly declining to make glamour an issue in her campaign . . . She's a wise woman. From a pin-up and popsickle point of view, La Luce has the Connecticut Portia beat there before she begins . . . Instead, Miss Connors declares she will challenge Mrs. Luce strictly "on her record in Congress" and that she (Miss Connors) is firmly determined "to stay out of a cat fight." . . . Trouble is, no matter how strongly she has made up her mind in that respect, she'll find herself in a cat fight anyway. Male supporters will see to that. . . . I've never been able to figure out why, even when women in politics say exactly the same things about their opponents as men do, their statements invariably are construed as catty, and generally there's more than a passing hint that the women themselves are unpoised and out of place for expressing publicly any oppinion that happens to not tally exactly with the next woman's. The late Alice Duer Miller (who, incidentally, once, told me she wrote it "more from desperation than inspiration") expressed the idea aptly in her famous little poem:

"When men in Congress come to blows
At something someone said,
I always notice that it proves
Their blood is strong, and red;
But when two women disagree
With very little noise,
It proves—and this seems very strange to me—
That women have no poise!"

SUMNER WELLESIANA: Time and time again the past few days I've heard Washingtonians say, in effect, "I can't wait to read Sumner Welles' book. What does he say about Secretary Hull?" . . . Even when Welles was Undersecretary of State it was an open secret that he was feuding with his immediate superior, and after his resignation, when plans for his book, just published, were announced, any number of his friends and foes predicted he would use that medium to attack his former chief . . . True, his "Time Decision" does that very thing, but not, as might be expected, in the vein of personal vituperation. . . . In each case Welles levels his criticism at "the State Department." . . . Secretary Hull's name is mentioned only once in the entire book, and as follows: "The greatest positive achievement of the first Roosevelt Administration in the realm of international cooperation lay in the trade agrements policy, for which Secretary of State Hull is wholly responsible, and which he has furthered with a single-minded and indefatigable devotion."

UPSIDE-DOWN DEPT.: Apparently Ted (Dr. Edward C., to you) Acheson's upside-down Chinese calling card wasn't the only misleading item in one of my recent columns on China. . . . But these things will happen. . . . Simultaneously we've had a number of latter-day Marco Polo returning, all of them laden with a cargo of anecdotes. . . . Ted gave me the story of the American soldiers and the rickshaw race, which I thought was a honey. . . . But, unfortunately, some other notes from an entirely different source, gleaned on the same day however, got attributed to him. . . . For my second article on China—the one dealing specifically with leading Chinese personalities—Ted, of course, supplied no part, not even a rickshaw. . . . But he must have been a bit surprised at questions asked him since the first piece was published. . . . Well, so have I been for that matter. . . . And Ted will understand, because he happens to be of that great fraternity who were newspapermen once themselves.

Longworth–Sturm Nuptial Date Chosen

Only members of the two families and a small group of intimate friends will attend the wedding of Miss Paulina Longworth, daughter of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and Alexander McCormick Sturm, which will take place Augut 26 at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Manchester, Mass.

Mrs. Longworth and her daughter are spending the month of August at nearby Magnolia, Mass., where the wedding reception will be held at the home of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward L. Bigelow. Colonel Bigelow is a cousin of the bride-elect's mother.

Miss Longworth will have as her only attendant Miss Elizabeth Wadsworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wadsworth of Pelham Manor, N. Y., and Justin Sturm, jr., will be his brother's best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturm, parents of the prospective bridegroom, Westport, Conn., will be with friends at Gloucester, Mass., for the wedding.

NAVAL OFFICER'S FIANCEE is Miss Louise Ruth Kutschinski, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christian D. Kutschinski of Raleigh, N. C., announce her engagement to Lieut. (j. g.) Thomas Miles Turner, USN, son of Mrs. Sam W. Turner of Washington and the late Mr. Turner. The prospective bridegroom is on active duty overseas

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Political Set

The speaker who (according to herself) represents "womanhood," and who is prepared to prove that her sex is not only going to control the election, but to vote down to the last woman for her candidate.

The insignia wearer, who is determined everyone shall know just where she stands—and not get her mixed up with the wrong crowd. To that end, she has campaign buttons firmly affixed to all her suits, coats, dresses, play clothes, bathing suits, house dresses, lounging robe and (in event of a fire) her nightgowns. She also has pennants on her motor cars, stickers on her stationery, a picture of her candidate in her window or on her office wall, and probably under her pillow.

The exotic young woman in one of the new weird winter hats at the cocktail party, who doesn't know much about politics, but who is "terribly interested," and who asks all the big, strong brainy men sipping double Scotches to tell her just who is going to be elected and why.

The tense little woman who feels deeply about her politics and who almost takes to her bed when she discovers that her new charming acquaintance who has a darling house, priceless antiques, etc., and who had seemed so intelligent—in fact had really looked and acted just like a Republican (or Democrat) is really of the opposite faith.

The woman who knows some relative or intimate friend of every leading candidate or his wife, and who can give you the inside on their personal lives, and who is already beginning to refer to the more promising ones by their first names.

The woman who knows just how the election is going to turn out because she has talked to a very dear friend who has just returned from a trip down South, or out West, or up North, and found that all the people in that part of the country are for Candidate So and So.

The women who tell you pop-eyed about the terrifying things that are going to happen if Roosevelt is reelected; those who tell you pop-eyed about the devastating things in store if Dewey sets foot in the White House.

The bright young woman who finds all regular party members "amusing" as well as futile, and who thinks that this country will never get anywhere until some of the "better minds" take over and run things.

The woman (or man) who cannot discuss politics without going into a huddle in a corner, and whispering, and who makes the simplest and most obvious remark in a secretive manner.

The one who considers herself (or himself) as being on the inside of things, one of the back of the scenes plotters, and who never makes a direct reply to any question, even one about the weather.

Those who were "born" Democrats (or Republicans) and boast of it; those who have never voted and boast of it; those who discuss the candidates in terms of their wives; those who "hate" the candidates on the other side; those who whisper personal gossip about them; those who should be required to pay a poll tax based on a mental testing before going to a ballot box.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Coffee Cream Adequate To Make Frozen Desserts

Because whipping cream is no longer available isn't any reason we can't make desserts with exceptionally fine texture. Flavorsome inexpensive desserts can be made with coffee cream, with half coffee cream and half milk, or even with milk alone.

Martha Ellyn

However, in making desserts with cream whose per cent of butterfat is not high, certain points must be observed. Coffee cream may be used in place of whipping cream in many frozen desserts. Substitute an equal amount of coffee cream for the combined quantities of whipping and coffee creams indicated in your favorite recipe. After the first mixture of ingredients has been chilled, add the coffee cream and place in the refrigerator's freezing tray until firmly frozen. Remove the contents of the tray to a very cold mixing bowl and whip until the mixture becomes light and creamy. Return to freezing tray and allow to finish freezing without further agitation.

Coffee Cream Adequate

Coffee cream usually contains 18 or 20 per cent butterfat. It can be used in place of whipping cream for garnishing desserts by first pouring into the freezing tray and allowing it to freeze partially before whipping. After whipping, place in the tray for additional freezing in order to hold it in proper consistency until serving time.

The best method to follow in freezing desserts is to set the cold control at the coldest position approximately one-half hour before placing the mixture in the tray for freezing. This assures colder temperatures in the freezing compartment, which results in faster freezing and better desserts. After the mixture is completely frozen, the cold control should be set at an intermediate position to keep the dessert in the proper consistency until serving time.

Mellowing Improves Desserts

All desserts, regardless of kind or the time required for freezing, are much improved in flavor and texture by allowing them to mellow. This is accomplished by allowing the dessert to remain in the freezing compartment for some time before it is served at a lower temperature than at which it is frozen.

Peaches are of good quality now so make up a fresh peach ice cream. Be sure to prepare coffee cream for whipping as suggested previously. Then with ingredients assembled proceed as follows:

FRESH PEACH CREAM

Soak 1 tablespoon gelatine in 3 tablespoons cold water for 5 minutes, then dissolve over hot water. Combine 2 cups fresh peach pulp, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and dissolved gelatine. Place in refrigerator to chill. Add ½ cup coffee cream and 1 cup coffee cream that has been whipped according to previous directions. Whip all until the consistency of a custard. Pour into tray and freeze. Remove tray and stir once during the freezing process. This stirring can be done in the freezing tray without removing it to the mixing bowl. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Orange Cream Sherbet is a delightful dessert that requires only coffee cream. Made with orange juice, eggs, lemon juice and cream it is nutritious but not so rich a dessert. It will please those who like frozen desserts and those who are watching their calories. Make it this way:

ORANGE CREAM SHERBET

Cook ¾ cup granulated sugar and ¾ cup water slowly for 10 minutes. Add grated rind of 1 orange to the sirup and continue cooking for several minutes. Strain. Add the sirup to 1½ cups orange juice and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Cool. Pour into freezing tray and allow to freeze firm. Remove mixture to chilled mixing bowl and beat until light and creamy. Add ½ cup coffee cream and fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites, to which has been added 1-16 teaspoon salt. Pour into tray and freeze. If ingredients separate, stir mixture with a spoon. When sherbet is frozen set control back to intermediate. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PEACH TIME is dessert time for this fruit lends itself to the making of many delectable dishes. Fine textured ice cream, flavored with peaches, can be made with coffee cream

Wool Not Rayon

Don't lay it on rayon if the moths attack something you thought they didn't care for. True enough, they don't bother rayon, but don't forget that many rayons are blended with wool and wool is a moth's idea of a juicy morsel. So if you have upholstery of rayon-and-wool mixture, be sure to protect it against moths just as you would an all-wool fabric.—E. M. B.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Suffering Many Indignities Inflicted By Her Husband, Wife Is Prepared to Demand An End to His Infidelity; How Go About It?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For years I have suffered many indignities at the hands of my husband, which I have forgiven. He realizes that probably no other woman would have forgiven as much. In spite of the fact that, according to him, I have his complete love and respect, he has a recurring need (it seems) for the companionshp of other girls,—usually man-chasing teen-agers or wives of servicemen away from home.

I think he has come to the conclusion that I am a doormat wife who will always be there; but in spite of my past docility, now that I have seen him with another woman I am determined to have all or nothing at all. He refuses to believe I could mean that I'm through. He has forced himself into our apartment against my will. I cannot sustain myself and child elsewhere.

Lack of Money Ties Her Hands

If I had assurance that he would never again go out with another woman, I'd glady welcome him back. But much as I hate to break up my home, I cannot go on unless absolute faith is restored,—based on a clean-cut discussion that convinces he is sincere. He refuses to discuss anything or to listen to me, even when appearances force me to conclude he has been out with some other woman. How can I make him understand I will not tolerate one more deviation from fidelity? I shall leave him if I have to beg on the streets!

Or is there some way I can force him to leave without it's costing me money? I have no evidence of more than platonic friendship with these women, but I assume from the money spent on them, etc., that he gets more than friendship. Haven't I the right to sever a relationship that is destroying my mental health? If so, please, how? He will NOT leave and I have no money. In fact, we're in debt.

W. Y. B.

Wishful Thinking Weakens Her Stand

DEAR W. Y. B.: It is not your husband, but yourself, who needs to be convinced that this is the showdown; that hereafter it's "either, or——" At the moment, your attitude amounts, unconsciously, to bluffing. You are no more prepared, with unalterable finality, to force a break with your husband if he makes one more false move, than he is prepared to stop philandering and be punctiliously true to you.

You are hamstrung by the indecisiveness of the wishful-thinker, who continues to trade in hopes that have no substance while painful facts of opposite import pile up neglected on the threshold of mind; and who fends against the increasing necessity of doing what inexorable logic tells him is inevitable, by juggling handfuls of "ifs" and "buts." Your delaying-action "if" of the moment is: "IF my husband would only reform; or at any rate, promise to reform." Your do-nothing "but" is: "BUT how can I break with him, supposing that's the course I fix on, when he won't get out and I have no cash to move on either?"

Man's Performance Rates Him Subzero

A MAN with your husband's history doesn't reform, for the simple reason that he has no foundation of good character on which to build. His philandering, per se, isn't the trait that damns him as no-good. It is the fact that he, a male adult with a wife and child, chases teenage girls and women whose husbands are perforce off at war,—the lowest form of activity a married man could pursue on the flirtation front. Add to that his half-animal, half-infantile wilfulness in returning home from such sordid sorties to break down the door a properly outraged wife has barred against him,—and what have you got? I'd say: Something less than zero in the scale of human values.

So throw the reform "if" out the window. To redeem your self-respect and restore peace of mind, and in behalf of your child's moral health, it seems to me you are obliged to deal him ou of your life. As for the "But how?"—according to proverb, "Where there's a will, there's a way." High purpose, firmly held, invariably finds means of constructive expression. If the relationship is wrecking your mental health, certainly you have a right to release. If your husband won't leave you in peace and you can't support the child unaided, talk to a lawyer in terms of separating from him on grounds of constructive desertion, alleging intolerable home conditions. Such an arrangement would put him under obligation to contribute to your separate maintenance; and rather than incur that double expense, he may choose to move out and let you have the home. If you cannot afford a lawyer, turn to the Legal Aid Bureau (or similar social agency) in your community.

The Federal Diary

The war has brought many characters to Washington and today's anonymous guest columnist, subbing for Jerry Kluttz, tells about one of them.

My old friend Cal Harrington turned up in Washington again the other day, after a year's absence, as dauntless and irrepressible as ever.

I first met Cal shortly after Pearl Harbor when he barged into our office to sound out the possibilities for a Government job. It wasn't hard to gauge his personality by the way he bellowed to my boss from the doorway, "Tom! you old stick-in-the-mud, you devil's spawn. I ain't seen you in a dawg's age!".

Cal had been living in a South American republic for 10 years, had made a bit of money down there before the depression, selling electrical gadgets, and had eventually married a South American girl of good family. The good marriage had given him entree into a fairly exclusive diplomatic circle, and after he had picked up enough Spanish for commercial purposes he was accepted (if not exactly trusted) by the politicos. He therefore came to us convinced that he had a few sure-fire tricks in his bag for doing a very smooth business with our good neighbors south of the border.

Cal also had a great way of ingratiating himself socially. His humor was earthy and his sallies were always accompanied by a loud self-appreciative guffaw; but he had learned to bow in courtly fashion over the hands of his severely correct Spanish mother-in-law and some of her venerable friends. So no matter how vulgar he became, those ladies, and most others, found it difficult to resist him.

It was just natural for a man of Cal's crust to make our office his headquarters while waiting to be hired. There were contacts to be made, over which he and Tom consulted interminably, and telephone calls, and all the other incidental deskwork that is required to build up a candidate for a job. And because of the reorganizations in the office, missions to foreign countries, run-of-the-mill turnovers, and regular and irregular hangovers, there was always at least one empty desk in our office. Therefore, Cal never lacked for a place to sit.

To me it semed that the man's ready laughter was overloud and much too cheerful. His relentless amiability beat down like too strong sunlight from which there is no escape. But the men around our office, who were regaled by his barnyard humor, took to Cal like an elephant takes to peanuts. And the stenographers in the next room found him a pushover for the coquetish glance. The girls loved his harline mustache, graying temples, and immaculate tailoring; they even doted on the black onyx ring he wore which was big enough to stun an alderman. Cal, for his part, never missed a trick either: his narrow green eye was alert for the curve of a calf, and his sharp car was always attuned to the rustle of a bustle.

It was a little funny, a little irritating to see how he made himself at home at the empty desk. He used the typewriter, filled out application blanks, wrote personal and business letters and little mash notes. He even wrote a "guest" report, entitled "The Future of Air-borne Freight in America and the World," which Tom presented to the head office, and which I understand was read there with a certain amount of admiration and wonder. (In the matter of writing reports Cal had, indeed, a slight fixation. The first thing he had said to me the day we were introduced was, "Are you writing a report?" When I had to confess I was not, he asked, "Why not? Everybody else is.)

And thus, little by little, Cal Harrington became well known about our office. He was invited to staff luncheons, went to all the meetings where his face was familiar and no questions were asked. He flirted with the girls, drank beer and cocktails with them, was invited to all the impromptu little parties that started in the office and wound up in someone's apartment, and had a corking good time all around while waiting the almost interminable period for the Government to hire him.

He became, in fact, a familiar sight that one day a newly appointed division chief rushed in and said to him breathlessly, "Do you know anything about rubber? I need a report on it at once." "Why sure I do," boomed Cal, "these days who doesn't? I've got some sure-fire dope about rubber and will be glad to write the report . . . but I haven't been hired yet!" With that he exploded in a hilarious roar that made the rafters ring, and in which everyone joined, including the division chief. . . .

It took Cal about three months to get himself hired as some sort of business specialist, and about three months more to be sent down to his old home in South America as a representative of the U. S. Government. When I met him the other day he told me he was back to make his report an drecommendations. But it is my guess that this is where I came in: the man is just looking for another empty desk. —N. S. Q. E.

Official-Looking Man 'Lifts' 3500 B Gas Stam

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 14 (AP).—A man with a briefcase walked into the main office of the Lancaster Ration Board, looked around, went back of the counter to the desks. Clerks thought he was anofficial and left him alone. He thumbed through a phone book, moved from desk to desk, left.

A few moments later they discovered 3500 B gasoline stamps, worth 17,500 gallons, were missing.

Williamson Quits as Head Of N.Y. Central

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Frederick E. Williamson, president of the New York Central Railroad Co. since 1932, resigned today because of ill health. He will be succeeded by Gustav Metzman, vice president of the company, at Chicago.

WILLIAMSON

Williamson will continue in an advistory capacity for the remainder of 1944.

The tall and scholarly Williamson has been ailing for some time and last week informed the executive committee that on the advice of his physicians he was compelled to relinquish active official responsibilities with the New York Central as well as in other companies of the system. He is 68 years old.

Williamson has spent almost his entire business life with the New York Central, entering the company's service in a subordinate capacity in the operating department after graduation from Yale University in 1898. Except for a period of military service in the First World War and a six-year stretch between 1925 and 1931 when he occupied executive positions on Western railroads, he had been with the company continuously.

Since assuming the presidency in 1932, Williamson guided the company through the worst depression in the Nation's history which saw more than 30 per cent of the railroad mileage in the United States forced into bankruptcy or receivership protection.

High Tribute Paid

Harold S. Vanderbilt, on behalf of the board of directors, paid Williamson high tribute today in announcing his resignation.

The new president of the system, Metzman, began his railroad career with the Baltimore & Ohio in 1903. He has been with the New York Central since 1920 in various capacities and a vice president since the first of this year, in charge of the system west of Buffalo.

J. L. McKee, now vice president and general manager of the Michigan Central lines, was appointed to take Metzman's office and C. L. Jellinghous, now manager of freight transportation, was named to McKee's place. Fred A. Dawson, superintendent of the Ohio division, will take over Jellinghous' duties.

Paper Salvage Beats Record In Alexandria

A record collection of paper for Alexandria, more than 102,450 pounds, was established by the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce in its two-day salvage campaign Saturday and Sunday, it was announced yesterday by J. Paul Tribles, general chairman. He said that the last city-wide drive yielded 34,000 pounds as reported by the city salvage chairman, Charles Henry Mason.

Cooperating in the work were Army personnel, including officers and men who brought 24 trucks from Fort Belvoir through arrangements made by the commanding general, Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young. Jaycee members accompanied the Army men and also drove 14 trucks contributed by private Alexandria business firms. A vanguard of Boy Scouts ran ahead to ring doorbells and notify home owners, who opened their storerooms and basements to the paper collectors, Tribles said.

On the committee of the Junior Chamber sponsoring the drive were the following leaders and several of their wives who took calls at their homes to notify the truck drivers of supplies missed during the canvass:
